LONDON—Party feeling rose to almost a dangerous pitch yesterday when Premier Asquith made his promised statement to the House. His declaration that he agreed with the statement made on Saturday by the first lord of the admiralty raised a perfect torrent of protest from the opposition benches, and when he went on to declare that the opposition must accept the principle of his scheme before he would give the details, he was charged by Mr. Bonar Law with requiring his opponents to make themselves responsible for the bill before they were acquainted with his proposals for amending it.

The intervention of Sir Edward Carson did not do much towards calming the tone of the discussion. He began by asking whether the prime minister now recognized that the proposals he had put forward were a hypocritical sham, to which Mr. Asquith replied that what he was asking for was an answer to the question as to whether the opposition were going to accept the principles of his proposals before he gave the details.

In the end the leader of the opposition made a demand for a day on which he could move what would practically amount to a vote of censure, a request which was immediately acceded to by the prime minister.

FATAL ATTACK ON
PARIS EDITOR BY
MME. CAILLAUX

Special Cable to the Monitor from its

PARIS—For some time past Gaston Calmette, editor of Figaro, has been conducting a ruthless political campaign against the finance minister, Joseph Caillaux. Yesterday afternoon a lady called to see M. Calmette at the moment that he was leaving the Figaro office in company with Paul Bourget, the Academician. The moment she entered his room she opened fire on him with a revolver, striking him in three places. When arrested the assailant proved to be Mme. Caillaux. The editor passed away this morning, and Mme. Caillaux has been sent to St. Lazare prison.

It is impossible to say what the effects may be on the political situation in France at the very moment when the country is approaching the elections. It is rumored that M. Caillaux will immediately resign, but, of course, nothing is known on this subject.

M. Calmette's attack on the finance minister has been conducted with the utmost ruthlessness for many months. After act in the latter's career has been gibetted and held up to execration, the charges culminating in the declaration that M. Caillaux's action respecting immunity of rent had been a screen for bores speculation of a particularly base description.

THROGS AWAIT EVACUATION
DAY PARADE IN PENINSULA

South Boston is celebrating Evacuation day today. Opening with the ringing of bells this morning, the Evacuation day ceremonies will continue until night. Thousands watched the parade, in which state, city and other officials took part. About 4000 men were in line. Business throughout South Boston closed at noon.

At 1:30 p. m. the members of the Evacuation day committee assembled at the home of Michael Norris, 670 Columbia road, to meet the Governor and staff. The parade formed in Edward Everett square, to be reviewed at the Parkman schoolhouse, between B and C streets, Broadway, by Governor Walsh, Mayor Curley and invited guests. At 4 p. m. it will be reviewed by the chief marshal at A street and Broadway.

At the meeting of the Evacuation day committee last evening a message to Mayor Curley was read in which it was stated that Congressman Decker of Missouri was on his way to this city to be the guest of the city and a speaker. The orator will be Congressman Ed-

C. B. STRECKER NAMED AS
ASST. TREASURY SECRETARY

Washington Reports Boston Man's Appointment by President for Federal Position in This City Although Recipient Has Not Received Notice Yet

WASHINGTON—The President has named Charles B. Strecker to be assistant treasurer of the United States at Boston. Mr. Strecker was one of the early and enthusiastic Wilson men in Massachusetts.

Mr. Strecker said this noon that he had had no official notification that the position of assistant treasurer had been tendered to him by the President and said he was ignorant of any such purpose on the part of the administration.

When told of the Washington despatch he said he believed that President Wilson had decided to appoint him to the position of assistant treasurer of the United States sub-treasury at Boston, though he said he had no information with which to verify this assumption. Charles H. Doty, Republican, now occupies the assistant treasuryship at the Boston sub-treasury.

Asked to state his attitude as to whether or not he would accept the Boston assistant treasuryship Mr. Strecker asked for time in which to give the matter consideration. He asserted that he knew practically nothing concerning the duties imposed upon the assistant treasurer and did not know whether he would be able to accept.

Charles Bren Strecker, who is a newspaper publisher, was born in Boston Oct. 18, 1863. He was educated in the public schools here. His business interests are directed in the presidency and general management of the Commercial-Financial Press Association and Commercial-Financial Printing Company. He is also a director of the Federal Trust Company and vice-president of Albert Frank & Co.

PEKING—The depredations of the brigand known as White Wolf, which began with a few minor acts of violence, have developed into something like a campaign. It is probably absolutely unsafe to accept the details of outrages which are supposed to have been committed by his band, which apparently numbers some thousand men.

No attempt has been made to punish him and the government seems incapable of protecting districts in which he is operating. At the moment he is said to be moving in the mountains on the borders of Houph and Honan.

LONDON—The charges made by the Morning Post and the National Review against Lord Murray respecting his Marconi transactions have now been formulated. They allege that at the time Lord Murray purchased shares, he was in possession of special information obtained through the attorney-general from Godfrey Isaacs, managing director of the company.

They also allege that the purchase of shares gave the then chief whip a personal interest in the conduct of public business not in accordance with the interests of the country. References are also made to Lord Murray's purchase of railway stock in the peculiar circumstances existing at the time of the coal strike.

To facilitate the work of the police an edict has been issued reintroducing the compulsory carrying of passports.

The new regulations give rise to some anxiety in Vienna, where they are taken as evidence of the increasing power of militarism. The restrictions, it is maintained, will not be effective, as there are many means of leaving the country.

For the benefit of illiterate minors between 16 and 21 classes in English for the non-English speaking of the night schools will not close with the close of the regular term on April 2, but will reopen on April 13 for a term of seven weeks. For the period from April 13 to May 28 sessions will be held on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings. This makes a night school year for the non-English speaking people of 30 weeks, the longest night school term which Boston has ever held and probably the longest that has ever been held in the state. The extension was decided upon by the school committee at its regular meeting last night.

The lengthening of the evening school term is in accordance with the general trend of night school instruction throughout the country.

Orders to the board of assessors to raise the assessment on several downtown pieces of property have been issued by Mayor Curley and are based on investigation, which, according to the mayor, disclose incongruities which when adjusted will increase the city's revenue.

The mayor announced last night that he would not reappoint Andrew A. Badaracco who was appointed by Mayor Fitzgerald to fill the unexpired term of John J. Murphy, former chairman of the board, whose term expires April 1. It was stated that other changes on the board of principal assessors may be expected soon and that many changes would also be made among the second assistants who are not protected by civil service ratings. The first assistants are under civil service and cannot be removed without hearing and the showing of definite cause.

In pursuit of his economy policy the mayor yesterday reduced the salaries of 15 draftsmen in the bridge department from $1400 to $1300, the change taking effect March 20.

FEDERAL ATTACK
ON VILLA'S SUPPLY
BASE IS REPORTED

A United Press despatch today from El Paso, Tex., declared that Escalon, the constitutionalist base north of Torreon, was attacked by Mexican federalists, and that Gen. Francisco Villa and Gen. Felipe Angeles, commanding the rebel artillery and their staff have hastened to the front.

The despatches say that Gen. Eugenio Aguirre Benavides with 3500 rebels and many cannon was compelled to fight all of yesterday to prevent the fall of Escalon. The Federal troops were under Gen. Ricardo Pena. General Pena, it was reported, retired at night-fall.

Since Gen. Villa first began preparing for the Torreon campaign he has been concentrating his provisions and supplies of ammunition at Escalon. Food for a long campaign and millions of rounds of ammunition are stored there.

No word, the United Press says, has been received at rebel headquarters in Juarez regarding an engagement reported in Bustamante canyon between Nuevo Laredo and Monterey, where the Constitutionalists are said to have been routed. Juarez officials discredit the report.

Expected by End of the Week

TIME GIVEN COMPANY

Senator Weeks Given Credit

WASHINGTON—Agreement between Attorney-General McReynolds and Chairman Elliott on the New Haven problem is expected within a few days, possibly Friday or Saturday, by those in intimate touch with the situation. This encouraging information comes as a direct result of Senator Weeks' presentation of the practical side of the question to the President yesterday.

Aroused to the gravity of delay the President immediately took an active personal interest, and it is believed made it plain to the department of justice that expedition of agreement on essentials is necessary, the details to be worked out at leisure. No definite time limit for duration of the trusteeship will be fixed, it is believed, this question being left to the courts. Senator Weeks pointed out to the President that fixing a time for expiration of the trustee would give the investing public definite basis for speculation, whereas the road needs unhampered opportunity to dispose of securities in order to meet its obligations.

It is acknowledged that should the road be forced to dispose of its securities at the end of two or three or five years, the public would wait until the end of the stipulated time to buy, expecting forced sale prices.

On authority of the President, it was announced at the White House today that New Haven negotiations are proceeding equally and that no receivership for the New England lines is apprehended the statement was made in reply to numerous queries by callers. Since his talk with Senator Weeks Monday, the President has given the problem careful consideration and now feels that no crisis is imminent.

The news came as a surprise to those who have been following closely the developments as prospects of an agreement have appeared less and less likely during the past few days. It is generally believed today that Senator Weeks, by going direct to the President, has saved the New England lines from the disastrous results of a receivership.

As was stated a few days ago, the parties in interest were practically deadlocked. Through the intercession of Senator Weeks, the government has been made to see the wisdom of tempering its rigid attitude on certain points to meet practical business conditions. The President has a specially high regard for the Massachusetts senator's ability and sincerity augmented by Senator Weeks' final stand for the administration's currency bill and not a better person nor a more opportune moment could have been chosen for presenting the case to the chief executive.

Conferences will be resumed upon return of Messrs. Adkins and Gregory from New England on Friday.

BOSTON & MAINE TO SELL ITS
MAINE CENTRAL ROAD STOCK

Boston & Maine stock showed a two-point advance today, selling at 39 during early trading, as a result of announcements that a stockholders' meeting will be called to authorize the sale of the road's Maine Central holdings.

The proposed sale would bring in about $15,000,000 and would furnish money to be applied on the notes due Feb. 3 and extended to June.

Boston & Maine sold at 39½ at 1 o'clock. New Haven was quoted at 69½, an advance of one point from yesterday's close.

The B. & M. issued a call today for a special meeting of the stockholders for Monday, March 30, at the North station, to "consider and act upon a proposed sale of this company's shares in Maine Central Railroad Company at $95 a share and on terms by which this company is to receive $3,000,000 in cash on or before the first day of May, 1914, and the balance of the purchase price in three or five year 5 per cent notes of the "Maine railway companies," secured by pledge of the purchased stock.

It is understood that a public offering of these notes will be backed by a strong syndicate of bankers.

The Boston & Maine owns $13,960,100, par. of Maine Central stock, carried at a cost price of $16,298,998. A price of $95 a share would be equivalent to $15,162,095.

The Maine Central will act on the proposition at a stockholders' meeting called for March 31.

Turkey Praised for Its Conduct in Financial Affairs

SIR ADAM BLOCK RETURNS REPORT ON PUBLIC DEBT

British Representative on Council of Administration Forecasts Steady Improvement in Economic Condition of Country

RESERVE FUND INTACT

(Special to the Monitor)
LONDON, Eng.—Sir Adam Block, the British representative on the council of administration of the Ottoman public debt, has just issued a report.

The annual report of the council itself was issued some time ago, but as it only covers the year ended March 31, 1913, much of the information is considerably out of date. Sir Adam Block adds much useful information relating to the last 11 months.

During the greater part of the time under consideration Turkey was at war, first with Italy and then with the Balkan States. Immense areas of territory, during the latter war, were devastated by opposing forces and the collection of revenue was almost impossible. It is remarkable in these circumstances, as Sir Adam Block points out, that the gross revenue of the debt should only be diminished from £15,610,335 for the year 1911-12 to £14,526,005 for the year 1912-13.

All through the report, Sir Adam Block takes an optimistic view of the Ottoman financial affairs. "Pessimistic rumors," he writes, "have been so persistent, that anything I may say of an optimistic nature may be received with skepticism, but nevertheless I have no hesitation in affirming that the check in the steady improvement of the economic condition of the country for a number of years past is only temporary, and that in spite of the war, and the financial straits of the Turkish government, there is every reason to believe that, with peace assured, the revenues will continue to show a steady improvement."

The sum required to meet the obligations of the Unified Debt and Lottery bonds is £12,157,375 per annum. There was last year, according to Sir Adam Block, a margin of £1,585,959, while a reserve fund of £12,000,000 remained intact, throughout the war.

As regards the territory ceded, after the war, the debt council has recently prepared tables showing the share of the debt for each of the states in proportion to the new territory that they had acquired.

Sir Adam Block expresses himself as confident that the final decision in the matter will not be long delayed, and that the rights of the respective bondholders will be fully assured to them by the great powers. At a time in which so much adverse criticism is being leveled against the Ottoman government, it is interesting to find Sir Adam Block expressing considerable commendation of the attitude of the authorities at Constantinople.

"The government," he says, "have been hard put to it to make both ends meet, but great credit should be accorded them for having throughout scrupulously respected their engagements to their creditors. Not only have they observed a perfectly correct attitude with regard to the ceded revenues, but they have, as in preceding years, afforded the debt council all possible assistance throughout 24 months of political and financial crisis. The collection of the revenues proceeded with the utmost regularity, and the debt council has continued undisturbed its work of developing and improving the administration of the debt."

Sir Adam Block further maintains that, in spite of much that has been said to the contrary, the Turkish authorities were never more willing and never more eager to profit by experience, and to learn everything possible from advisers.

The wrestlers numbered 170, representing 20 middle schools and 18 colleges, and the wrestling opened at 8 a. m. and closed at 10 p. m.

The champion flags were carried off by the Kajio middle school for the juniors, and by the Toyama Military College for the seniors. Great interest was taken by the public in the meeting.

GLASGOW PLANS CAMPAIGN FOR RECRUITING TERRITORIALS

(Special to the Monitor)
GLASGOW, Scotland.—Already efforts are being made to arouse public interest in the recruiting fortnight to be held in Glasgow to stimulate and encourage the young manhood of the city and district to perform their duty by serving their King and country in some branch of the territorial companies of the Scottish regiments.

The feeling is that there is a danger nowadays when the volunteer army for home defense has to confine itself almost entirely to practical training that its usefulness and importance may be overlooked. The bright uniform that used to attract is gone, everything is centered now in efficiency, and the lowland division has fallen somewhat behind in numbers though by no means in good material.

It is hoped that this special effort will bring each unit up to its full strength. Already the mounted battalions are filled up, but more men are required for the infantry. The British army film, lately seen by the King and Queen, will be exhibited largely by the picture houses of the city, five-a-side football tournaments

SPAIN'S ANSWER ON TANGIER CODE CALLED CORDIAL

(Special to the Monitor)
PARIS, France.—The statement which has been made that Spain had strongly opposed the amendments in the drawing up of the constitution of Tangier proposed by France and Great Britain has been contradicted.

It appears that the answer of Spain was perfectly cordial, although she did object to the conditions proposed for the election of the cadí and other native officials. According to the draft of the constitution as it stands at present the elections of these officials lies with the Muhammadan population of Tangier, and it is the opinion of the French government that it should be given to the Sultan, in accordance with Muhammadan custom.

It is held by all those who are acquainted with Morocco that the natives do not possess sufficient political education to be entrusted with such important functions, and that to do so would be to jeopardize the future of Tangier.

NEW TESTAMENT TRANSLATION OF WILLIAM TINDALE PRAISED

(Special to the Monitor)
EDINBURGH, Scotland.—Dr. Smellie lately delivered his concluding lecture of the present series, in connection with the Protestant institute, and, summing up the points of the last three addresses, he said, in speaking of William Tindale and his translation of the New Testament, that it was to the honor of Protestantism, that wherever she had established herself in life and power her children had been eager for the diffusion of the Bible.

Having sketched Tindale's biography, his heroic, patient labor, the vicissitudes through which he passed in the prosecution of his purpose, Dr. Smellie gave some account of the different editions of the New Testament issued under Tindale's supervision. Of these the revised edition of 1534 was the most important; this Bishop Westcott described as "altogether Tindale's noblest monument."

The marginal glosses of this edition were described, mainly for the light which they threw on the character of their author. It had been questioned whether Tindale had the scholarship which could enable him to go back to the original languages of the Bible. But there was ample proof that, while he owed much to the German of Luther and the Latin of Erasmus, he was himself familiar with Hebrew and Greek, and that in translating he pursued his own independent course. He was marked also by a great and admirable power of taking pains, as was manifested by the number of alterations in the edition of 1534 when compared with that of 1525.

It is not too much to assert, the lecturer said, that Tindale's New Testament was the real foundation and basis of our Authorized Version with its homely and haunting, musical and majestic English.

In speaking of the Scots Confession of 1560 the lecturer gave some account of the six Johns, to whom the authorship of the Confession is usually ascribed: Winram, Spottiswoode, Willock, Douglas, Row and Knox, the last, who was the greatest, having no doubt the chief share in the composition of its contents. The lecturer summarized briefly its 25 articles, and alluded to the love cherished for it by some of the Marrow men and to the honor in which it was held by Edward Irving.

ULSTER VOLUNTEERS HOLD MANEUVERS AT WHITEHEAD

Outpost Party of Landing Force Attempts to Secure Itself in Position Commanding Town But After Long Skirmish Judges Give Victory to Defense

BELFAST, Ireland.—Skirmishing maneuvers were conducted about a mile outside Whitehead recently. Whitehead is situated about 10 miles from Belfast, along the Antrim side of the Lough, and the fine fields and big ditches of the surrounding country made a very suitable place for a skirmishing ground.

The idea was that a small outpost party of a landing force had disembarked at Whitehead, but were unable to land their main force. This force had to secure itself in a position commanding Whitehead, but met with a defending force early in their movements. The landing force came by train from Belfast, and were a contingent of Belfast men. Prior to their arrival the Whitehead men had gone out and occupied a group of farmhouses as their outposts.

Scouts, outpost patrols and signallers were placed at various points of vantage surrounding the farmhouses, and the enemy in due course appeared between the farmhouses and Whitehead, and also considerably on the right flank of the Whitehead men. As the enemy advanced the Whitehead scouts, signallers and other contingents retired gradually toward the farmhouses, taking cover with great care, and carrying out all they knew of open country skirmishing. The enemy advanced with equal caution and care along the hedges and ditches, avoiding every possibility of showing themselves. It was the object of both camps to ascertain the force of their opponents at all points. At one point the Whitehead men were very successful in this maneuver. Their strength was underestimated by the Belfast men, who were ultimately taken prisoners and put out of action.

Toward the closing stages of the skirmish very good field work was done by the Belfast contingent, who made short rushes where it was impossible to advance along the ditches. The short rushes of about 50 yards, then lying down flat, getting up again, and advancing at the word of command each time, were very interesting.

The complete movement took about two hours and a half, the number engaged were 320, about 120 belonging to the Belfast contingent and 200 of the Whitehead party. At the conclusion the judges agreed that the farmhouses held by the Whitehead men was too strong a position for the landing force to take.

The greatest enthusiasm prevailed, and men could be seen crawling along watery ditches and squeezing through hedges with evident enjoyment.

This idea of opposing towns or groups of the volunteers skirmishing against one another is a comparatively late development, but the idea is spreading rapidly.

On the same day Newtownards and Comber men—two neighboring towns—also held a skirmish.

GENERAL SMUTS PROMPTS SOUTH AFRICA INQUIRY

Committee to Investigate Circumstances in Which Labor Member Became Informed Concerning Message of Government

SPYING IS ALLEGED

(Special correspondence of the Monitor)

CAPE TOWN, S. Africa.—On the motion of General Smuts in the House, recently, a select committee was appointed by the speaker to inquire into the circumstances in which Mr. Creswell became informed of a telegram sent some time ago from the defense department in Cape Town to the defense department in Pretoria. This telegram ordered the destruction of certain war documents, and Mr. Creswell jumped to the conclusion that what was being ordered was the destruction of evidence in regard to the recent industrial troubles.

In the course of his speech General Smuts declared that Mr. Creswell could only have obtained his information from a spy or a thief in the public service, and that consequently it was a matter of first importance that the whole affair should be carefully gone into.

Speaking in reply, Mr. Creswell declared that the methods of the government put a "strain upon the ordinary traditions of the civil service." He insisted that where the liberty of the subject was being undermined it was impossible to expect that the public services could remain intrenched. As a member of Parliament he claimed that he had a right to use any information which came his way, no matter how it was obtained; at the same time he repudiated the suborning of public servants as base and detestable.

As to the proposed committee of inquiry, he warned the House that with a government of despot tendencies secrecy might be carried to a length dangerous to the public interest. In conclusion he declared that even if a committee were appointed they would gain nothing by it as far as he was concerned, for he would tell nothing.

The leader of the opposition, Sir Thomas Smartt, spoke immediately after Mr. Creswell, whose attitude in the matter he vigorously denounced. The question, he said, was not one of mere politics, but one which concerned the honor of Parliament and the public service. If Mr. Creswell had frankly apologized and thrown himself on the clemency of the House, the case would have been different, but Parliament resented the attitude he had taken up, and would know how to deal with this infringement of its authority.

BRITISH NAVAL SURPLUS IS MADE KNOWN IN REPORT

(Special to the Monitor)
LONDON.—The report of the comptroller and auditor-general upon the appropriation account of the receipts and expenditure for navy services for the year which ended March 31, 1913, was issued recently as a white paper.

The total surplus to be surrendered to the exchequer is £142,231 as compared with the surplus of £1,978,243 for the year 1911-12, which was duly surrendered. In the navy estimates for 1912-13 a gross expenditure of £46,930,292 was provided for, including a supplementary estimate of £900,000, while the actual gross expenditure was £46,882,965, giving a surplus of £56,327.

The receipts to be appropriated in aid of the exchequer grants were estimated at £1,863,892, while the actual receipts amounted to £1,949,796, or £85,904 in excess of the estimate. These figures give a total surplus to be surrendered of £142,231 as mentioned above.

The smallness of the surplus is due to large variations between expenditure and estimated expenditure on several of the votes balancing each other, rather than to accuracy in budgeting.

ORANGE GROWING ON BEIRUT PLAIN CALLED SUCCESS

(Special to the Monitor)

BEIRUT, Syria.—In the Bekut plain the cultivation of oranges and lemon trees is supplanting the cultivation of mulberry trees and the change is found to be very advantageous.

The chief rabbi of Jerusalem has prohibited all Jews from buying oranges from consignments not examined by him. The Palestine says on the subject: "This measure comes from Jaffa. The cause of it is that this year the Jewish colonies have had an abundant crop of oranges. There are actually at Jerusalem 60,000 Jews, and these Jews should only buy oranges gathered in the Jewish colonies."

QUEENSTOWN STOP URGED AT DUBLIN MEETING

All-Ireland Gathering Passes Resolutions of Protest Against Results of Action of the Cunard Steamship Company

STEPS ARE PLANNED

(Special to the Monitor)
DUBLIN, Queenstown—An all-Ireland meeting representing all classes and all shades of political opinion was held recently in Dublin Mansion House to consider the action to be taken in view of the postmaster-general's decision to release the Cunard Steamship Company from its obligation to call at Queenstown in execution of the United States mail contract. Letters from Irish members of Parliament of all parties were read sympathizing with the object of the meeting.

The Lord Mayor of Dublin declared that public feeling in the country was growing to such an extent that it was quite feasible that several public men would be asked to travel to the United States for the purpose of organizing public meetings in all the great towns in the hope of securing, if not a direct service with Queenstown by means of an English company, at all events a service by means of a German, or, if possible, an Irish-American company.

Richard Gamble, president of the Belfast Chamber of Commerce, proposed a resolution expressing indignation at the unjust, if not illegal, action of Mr. Samuel in violating the terms of the mail contract with the Cunard Company, and protesting against his arbitrary and discourteous action in disregarding the united request of the Irish people, of all shades of public opinion to withhold his assent to the demand of the Cunard Company until Parliament had an opportunity of discussing the question, and in his refusal to receive an all-Ireland deputation.

Sir Roger Casement proposed a resolution affirming that, if all Irish effort to compel the present government to enforce their contract with the Cunard Company in its entirety as regarded Queenstown failed, that committee would do all in its power to enable the united people of Ireland to deal with this wanton breach of public faith through Irish-American statesmanship and their widespread kindred in America.

He believed it was not impossible that if their business men would really face the question from a business point of view they would obtain financial support in the United States that would enable them to establish independent lines of communication between Ireland and America.

He had been assured by two very prominent Americans, one a German-American and the other an Italian-American, that were a definite project put forward in the United States they were convinced that not only would Irish-Americans respond but also German-Americans and that money would be found for taking up the shares throughout the country.

The resolution, with that of Sir Roger Casement embodied in it, was passed, and other resolutions were adopted urging

PORTRAIT MEDALLION OF KING ON NEW BELGIUM GOLD COINS

(Special to the Monitor)
GHENT, Belgium—The Brussels mint is now engaged in preparing an issue of new gold coins bearing a portrait medallion of the present King. The total value of the issue being $3,000,000. The last issue of gold coin in Belgium dates back to 1882, at which time gold 20-franc pieces were coined of a total value of $10,440,200.

Gold currency is at present exceedingly scarce in Belgium, owing, it is stated, to the unfavorable exchange on France. The total amount of gold coinage issued in Belgium up to the present time amounts to $3,984,745, of which a total of $1,340,875 was of 25-franc pieces, $1,583,990 of 20-franc ing Sir Edward Carson, Mr. Redmond, and Mr. O'Brien to wait on the prime minister with regard to the matter. It was also agreed that the Lord Mayor of Dublin should appear at the bar of the House of Commons to present a petition.

WORLD COUNCIL OF WOMEN PLANS ROME MEETING

(Special to the Monitor)
BERLIN, Germany—The International Council of Women, which has a membership of over 10,000,000, distributed throughout all the civilized countries of the world, will hold its fifth general meeting from May 4 to May 13 in Rome in conjunction with an international congress of women.

The Union of Austrian Women's Societies has invited the International Council of Women, whose president is Lady Aberdeen, wife of the viceroy of Ireland, to pay a visit to Vienna after the meeting in Rome, and a great number of prominent leaders of the women's movement have already accepted the invitation.

The Austrian society is desirous of giving their distinguished guests a fitting reception, and for this purpose the reception committee has been divided into eight sections which will work in conjunction with the central office under the direction of the board of the Union of Austrian Women's Societies.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA WHEAT MEN FIX STANDARD BUSHEL

(Special to the Monitor)
ADELAIDE, South Australia—Good progress has been made by the farmers with the garnering of their crops in South Australia.

In accordance with the usual practice, the corn trade section of the Chamber of Commerce met recently for the purpose of fixing the standard at which all wheat is to be sold during the ensuing 12 months. For this purpose parcels of wheat 14 pounds in weight were obtained from the various agricultural bureaus in the country, and although there was considerable disparity in the samples submitted the chamber was enabled to fix the weight of the standard bushel at 61½ pounds.

It must be remembered that the standard is fixed for the whole of the state, and that there are a number of districts which could supply wheat of a greater weight per bushel than that decided on.

BRITISH LAND PROPOSALS TOLD TO CORNWALL FARMERS

(Special to the Monitor)
WESTMINSTER—Speaking in reply to a deputation from the Cornwall County Farmers Union which waited on him in his private room in the House of Commons recently, the chancellor of the exchequer said that in hundreds and perhaps thousands of villages, it was quite true that the deficiency of cottages was, to a certain extent, due to the fact that men who were not agricultural laborers were on the lookout for cottages. But those were men whose labor was essential to the community, and they must provide cottages for all the people whose labor was essential to the general well-being.

Going on to consider the question of security of tenure, Mr. Lloyd George said that whilst a tenant might have perfect confidence in the honor and generosity of his landlord, he did not always extend that confidence to his agent, and the farmer wanted to feel independent of any of these contingencies. A good deal of the best expenditure that a tenant farmer could put into his farm was the kind of expenditure which did not bear fruit for a good many years after. He put his experience into improving his farm, and he wanted to feel that he could reap the benefit of it when the time came.

The chancellor then went on to refer to local taxation and tenants' improvements. The farmer and the trader, he said, were laboring under a disadvantage at the present moment. With regard to the maintenance of the roads, he expressed the opinion that they were undoubtedly bearing an undue share of the rates.

The government proposed to deal with that, and to deal with it immediately. As to small holdings it was their intention to do all they could to promote the interests of the small holder. Amongst other things they were discussing the question of railway rates, of cooperation and credit banks, and things of that sort, and they hoped that by such schemes they would be able to extend the area available for small holdings without encroaching upon the land held now by the farmers.

GERMAN RADICAL PARTY REMOVES ARMED FORCE BILL

(Special to the Monitor)
BERLIN, Germany—The Radical committee, having rejected by 11 votes to 10 the first clause of the Radical bill providing that "Armed force can only be used to deal with internal disorders at the request of the civil authorities," the entire bill was withdrawn by the Radical party.

This followed on the announcement by the representative of the government that he was not possessed of the information regarding the legislation of the several states with regard to the use of armed force in time of peace, and that some little time must elapse before the government was ready to produce such information.

The center and National Liberal parties moved an adjournment of the committee, but the Socialists and Radicals opposed the proposal, and insisted on the discussion of the Radical bill being immediately proceeded with. Its rejection was followed by the negating of the motions put forward by the Alsatian, Polish and center parties, and the committee, having no further reason d'être, dissolved.

GERMAN COLONIES' EXPORTS DEVELOP

(Special to the Monitor)
BERLIN, Germany—From recently published figures it appears that the German colonies are developing surely if slowly. The most satisfactory product appears to be the African diamond, which at the time of its discovery by Herr Dernburg, was so welcome a target for the ridicule of the Social Democrats. During the past year diamonds to the amount of 30,400,000 marks have been exported from German African territory.

WESTMINSTER—The first lord of the admiralty announced recently in the House of Commons that it had been decided to substitute this year a test mobilization of the third fleet for the grand maneuvers. This was a more necessary test and involved a considerable saving of expense. All the ordinary naval maneuvers and exercises would take place as usual.

GREAT FUTURE FOR AUSTRALIAN STATE FORECAST

Country Most in Need of Agricultural Laborers and Farmers at Present Time Says the Hon. Digby Denham in London

OPPORTUNITIES TOLD

(Special interview with the Hon. Digby F. Denham, premier of Queensland.)
LONDON—The Hon. Digby Denham, premier of Queensland, who is on a visit to England, courteously accorded an interview to a representative of The Christian Science Monitor, at the spacious offices of the state in the Strand. Mr. Denham, whose name will always be associated with the land legislation of Queensland, for which he is largely responsible, spoke very warmly of the prospects of the country.

"Queensland," he said, "is a country of primary productions, that is to say the chief industries of the country are pastoral, agricultural and mining. It is therefore men who can adapt themselves to these three spheres of labor whom we encourage to come out to us. We do not encourage clerks, neither do we encourage railway workers. In these spheres the employment is only limited and we believe very strongly in employing our own people."

Chief Industry Pastoral

"In regard to our railways, we certainly disagree with Lord Claude Hamilton, and prefer to encourage our men to win the blue ribbons of the service. The chief industry of the country is still pastoral, and enormous tracts of land are devoted to this industry. Pastoral work, however, does not offer much employment to the intending emigrant. The number of men employed, even on the biggest stations, is comparatively small. Shepherds, of course, are no longer in demand, and really the only hands needed are what we call boundary riders who ride about the stations keeping an eye on the flocks and herds and reporting to the manager their condition.

"Even in shearing time there is no demand for extra hands, as all the shearing, of course, is now done by contractors who travel from station to station, and although there still are men who shear sheep by hand, nevertheless, it is an art which is fast being superseded. You will see from this that the pastoral industry has few openings for the immigrant and the squatter himself is so prosperous that only the man with considerable capital has any chance of obtaining a pastoral holding, it being almost impossible to buy the squatter out."

"Under the system of land tenure in Queensland," Mr. Denham continued, "no land can be sold for pastoral purposes, but experience shows that the agriculturist will have a freehold and accordingly farm tracts are made available in varying areas. Pastoral and grazing holdings are let on a 30-years lease, and under that lease one fourth of a pastoral holding can be resumed without notice at any time, and the rest can be resumed by the government if it is needed for higher uses according to a definite procedure laid down in the act. By higher uses we mean the utilization of the land so as to employ a larger number of men and to produce a greater return in the way of produce, as in the case of agriculture."

Opening for Immigrant

"In this industry there are perhaps the largest openings for the immigrant. A large number of agricultural laborers and farmers are needed, and the prospects for the man with experience, even if he has only very small capital, are excellent."

Asked as to what class of people would be most likely to benefit by emigration, Mr. Denham said that it was perhaps the man and wife with a family who reaped the most benefit from the change of country. "The father and mother," he went on, "may not find themselves in a very much better position than they are at home in point of wages, but the children have a prospect before them such as they certainly have not got in the old country."

"Our education is free from the kindergarten to the secondary schools, we have scholarships from there on to the universities, and any parent in receipt of less than £3 a week, whose boy or girl obtains a scholarship, may claim from the state a subsidy of 10 shillings a week in order to enable the boy or girl to take advantage of the scholarship he or she may have secured. In every way the prospects for the rising generation, especially in Queensland, are most excellent, and that is why I say that the man and wife with a family gain most by the change."

"Any one, however, who is willing to work, who is not over particular what he does, is sure of and more than sure of making a livelihood. Then, there is, of course, the fruit growing industry which is destined to be among the greatest in Australia, and which is developing rapidly, and there is also the mining industry. The mining industry is not in the hands of the government, but the Mount Morgan Gold Mining Company have need of men in large numbers who are accustomed to mining for minerals."

"The town of Mount Morgan is beautifully situated on the seacoast, the wages offered are high, and the work is not too laborious."

"Then, of course," Mr. Denham went on, "we want domestic servants, just as you want them here. A special feature in our immigration policy at present is the encouragement we are giving to youths from 16 and upward to come out to Queensland. We have done this now for some time, through the Church Army, and with the very best possible results.

"The Church Army in each case has to provide £5 toward the youths' passage and outfit, and in no single case have these lads failed to refund this money to the Church Army, so that they have actually lost nothing as a consequence of their efforts."

Mr. Denham next went on to speak of the great value of artesian water supply in pastoral areas. This artesian supply, he explained, has largely revolutionized the pastoral industry. It has greatly minimized the risks occasioned by drought, and it has enabled large tracts of land to be utilized for pastoral purposes which otherwise would have remained idle.

"The flow from these wells," Mr. Denham explained, "is constant and the water is conducted all over an estate by means of drains, so that at no point has one to go far to obtain water. I was talking only last night to a wealthy squatter from Queensland, who told me that from one boring on his station he had been able to make use of 100 miles of such drains, and his whole estate, which was a large one, was amply supplied with water."

In reply to a question as to whether the tendency would not be for the pastoral industry to be eventually crowded out by the agricultural, Mr. Denham said that the limits of the agricultural industry were comparatively quickly reached.

Railways Needed

"You see," he said, "no agriculturist can with profit be more than 15 miles from a railway station. A dairy farmer may be something more, but for the agriculturist I would fix 15 miles as the limit. You will see from this that in a country 3½ times the size of Great Britain, which possesses only 4663 miles of railway route, although that is a greater mileage than any other state, the limits to agriculture are still conditional upon further railway construction."

"I find," Mr. Denham went on, "that the average Englishman has really no idea of the size of the greater Australian states, and after all it really conveys very little to one to be told that Queensland, for instance, is some 600,000 square miles in extent. There is, however, one way in which the great size of the country can be realized. When I carried through my last electioneering campaign through the state, I started from the capital Brisbane, and my first stopping place was at Long Reach, which is about as far as from London to Marseilles; from Long Reach I travelled to Winton, a distance equal to that between London and Vienna, from Winton I went on to Cloncurrie, which was similar to traveling from London to Naples, and from Cloncurrie to Cairns via Normanton, which equaled in distance that between London and Constantinople."

"You will thus see that one is dealing with a country which is almost continental in size. When you consider that really only a part of this vast country is at present being used, that the greater part of that which is being used is not being put to its highest use, you will understand that we regard the resources of the country as practically inexhaustible."

ASSAM PLANTATIONS LABOR PROBLEM SOLUTION ADVANCES

Indian Association Connected With Industry Welcomes Government Proposal to Abolish Arkati Recruiter and Also Proposed Supervising Bureau

(Special to the Monitor)
CALCUTTA, India—The question of recruiting labor for the plantations in Assam has advanced somewhat recently. It may be remembered that some months ago the government of India intimated to an Indian association connected with this industry, an influential body of proprietors, its desire that recruiting by professional crimps, or arkatis, should cease altogether in July, 1915, and also that it was desirable to establish a bureau under government, to supervise and regulate the conditions of recruitment.

In a letter lately published this association cordially welcomes the proposal to abolish the arkati recruiter, and also the proposed supervising bureau. To this acceptance it attaches only one condition, and that is that the government of India will bring pressure to bear upon the government of Madras to induce that government to withdraw its determined opposition to recruitment in the Madras agency tracts.

It should be explained that the Madras agency tracts are semi-independent states ruled over by hereditary princes, but under the supervision, and practically subject to the control of the Madras government. In some of these states there is a class of labor which has proved itself to be particularly useful upon the plantations, but the Madras government has long been steadfastly opposed to permitting the plantations to recruit labor in them, while up to a year or two ago the South African and other colonies were suffered freely to carry on recruiting operations in those tracts.

In its letter to the government of India the association points out that the Madras government stands alone among the provincial governments in this impervious hostility to recruiting for the industry, and thinks that steps should be taken to induce it to modify its attitude. The association asserts that the inhabitants of the tracts themselves are often anxious to emigrate, and adds:

"The committee venture to think it a strange thing that for years there has been, on the part of the local government, such an unchanging attitude of opposition to the free movement of the inhabitants of districts forming a part of British territory, when those inhabitants themselves desire to go to another part of India where the conditions of life are more favorable."

SYDNEY BUILDING LAST YEAR SHOWS RECORD IN NUMBER

(Special to the Monitor)
SYDNEY, New South Wales—A record number of buildings were erected in Sydney during 1913, according to figures taken from a report of the Sydney water and sewage board regarding the number of buildings completed and supplied with water in Sydney and its suburbs during 1913.

The report states that 9284 buildings were completed in Sydney last year. These figures compare favorably with 8862 in 1912, the former highest record. The cost of construction amounted to £6,371,617, compared with £5,432,754 in 1912. The report adds that the demand for houses in Sydney and its environs is still very great.

(Special to the Monitor)
GHENT, Belgium—The Belgium post-office department has decided to organize a school for letter carriers and postal agents. Those about to enter this branch of the service will be required to attend the school for a period of five months, and besides being given instruction in the routine duties that are required of them, will be obliged to master the two languages officially sanctioned in Belgium, that is the French and Flemish.

ITALY ALSO HAS CONSULAR COURTS FOR ABYSSINIA

(Special to the Monitor)
ROME, Italy—A comment by Signor Federzoni, Nationalist deputy for Rome, on the establishment of English consular courts in Abyssinia called forth a statement by Prince Scaletta. The fact that England had established these courts did not, he said, in any way run contrary to the agreement entered into by Italy and England in 1906.

Italy was in exactly the same position as England in Abyssinia, in that she also had the right to establish consulates in the country and had availed herself of that right. England was under no obligation to obtain the permission of Italy for the establishment of her consular courts.

IRRIGATION PLAN BRIGHTENS CITY'S FUTURE

Birdseye view of Ellensburg, Wash., located in center of state

ELLENSBURG, Wash.—Situated at an altitude of 1510 feet, Ellensburg has an annual rainfall of 10 inches. The climate is sunny and the winters short. There are good schools and well lighted streets, and both civic and industrial conditions here are regarded as of a high standard. The town is located in the geographical center of the state, in a fertile territory covering some 60,000 acres of irrigated hay, grain and orchard land. It has about 6000 population. Kittitas county also has highly developed coal mines, partially developed gold and iron mines and thousands of acres of private and government range, and uncultivated millions of feet of fir and pine timber. The main lines of the Northern Pacific and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroads serve this city.

A $5,000,000 issue of bonds for the construction of an additional irrigation system which will increase the irrigated area in the Kittitas valley by more than 100 per cent adds possibilities to a future for Ellensburg already brightened by its numerous resources.

NEW SYSTEM OF ASSESSMENT IS SUCCESSFUL IN PALO ALTO

Chamber of Commerce, After Testing Advantages of Somers Method for Fixing Property Valuations, Has Recommended It to Whole of Santa Clara County

PALO ALTO, Cal.—Efforts are being made by the Chamber of Commerce of Palo Alto to have the Somers system of assessing property, in the modified form in which it is applied here, adopted for the whole of Santa Clara county, including the city of San Jose. The operation of the system has been generally satisfactory in Palo Alto since 1910, when it was put into force, and the opposition to it has gradually disappeared.

Under this system county and city assessments are made on different plans. Citizens here, after experience, have concluded that the Palo Alto plan is so much better than the present county plan that they have decided to urge re-adjustment.

Comparisons show what has been accomplished. Real estate is now assessed at 60 per cent of its value and improvements at 40 per cent. What the basis was before, it is said, only the assessor knew. The basis of assessment is taken as the center lot of a block and the usual considerations are taken into account toward the corners. A typical business square is that bounded by University avenue, Bryant street, Hamilton avenue and Emerson street. Beginning with the business property at Bryant and University a comparison has been made of assessed values previous to the adoption of this system and what was placed on the books last year. For convenience the properties are simply designated by numbers. A table of assessed values is as follows:

Improvements	$5,500	$9,400
Real estate	4,000	4,900
Improvements	2,300	1,500
Real estate	1,100	1,650
Improvements	900	650
Real estate	1,100	1,500
Improvements	1,000	1,000
Real estate	10,000	19,500
Improvements	8,900	8,900
Real estate	2,500	2,500
Improvements	8,700	11,200
Real estate	4,000	8,000

A vacant block of ground in the fine residence district in 1908 was assessed at $9000, and in 1913 this had been increased to $18,000.

Tax Rate Dropped

Under the old system the tax rate in 1908 was $1.270 per $100 of assessed valuation. The first year under the revised system this dropped to $0.957 and since that time the rate has been 95 cents on each $100 of assessed valuation. Meanwhile the city has built up its waterworks system and in addition has constructed and is now operating a municipal electric plant. Just at present it is installing a garbage incinerator. Paving and sewers also have been taken care of adequately.

Frank Kason, city clerk and assessor, has this to say of the present assessment plan:

"When the Palo Alto freeholder's charter became effective a few years ago the ways and means committee of the city council worked out a system of land assessment which it was designed should impartially equalize the values and at the same time place the larger portion of the tax levy on the land. The basis adopted was 60 per cent on land values and 40 per cent on improvement and personal property values.

"A list of recent sales of property was made and the prices paid on different streets and in different sections of the city were used in estimating the value of the land. The assessed valuation per front foot, with a depth of 100 feet, was marked on a map. Ten per cent additional was provided for corner lots (25 feet in the business district and 50 feet in the residence district), and for depth of more than 100 feet a further percentage was added to the value—3 per cent for a depth of 105 feet, 7 per cent for 112½ feet, 10 per cent for 125 feet, 15 per cent for 150 feet and 20 per cent for 200 feet. No

More Equal Distribution

"The reason for placing the higher value on land was due mainly to the fact that a considerable net profit arising from the operation of the municipal light and power plants was annually turned into the general fund, and under the old plan unimproved property was escaping its just share of taxation, while home owners and patrons of the municipal plants were paying more than a just share of the taxes. Since then the policy has been adopted of reducing rates for water, light and power to the cost of production plus enough to maintain a small reserve fund for use in cases of emergency. The plan of assessment, however, has worked so satisfactorily that there has been no inclination to make a change.

"During the years which I have been assessor a close observation of values has led to the conclusion that the assessment is fair and equal, and it certainly gives better satisfaction than the former haphazard figures. The protests, which were frequent when the assessment of land was first increased, have ceased, and even the owners of the larger tracts of unimproved property accept the system as equitable.

"At the same time the assessment of land was fixed at 60 per cent the assessment of improvements was placed at 40 per cent, and as the value of the buildings is in most instances greater than the value of the land the home owner has had less taxes to pay.

"In making the assessment two years ago it was determined to get as nearly an equal assessment of the improvements as possible. To accomplish this two members of the council who are experienced building contractors, assisted the assessor in placing the real value on every building in the city. Each building was visited and appraised at the full value, was marked on maps, insurance maps showing all the buildings being used.

"These maps will have new buildings noted on them and will form permanent records. The full value being given, any required percentage of valuation can be taken in any given year, or a depreciation percentage may be marked off if this is found desirable.

"In making this appraisal of improvements it was found that some properties had been assessed too high and some too low under the old plan, and while it was not intended or desired to increase the total valuation the result showed an advance of about 5 per cent on residence and approximately 8 per cent on business buildings.

"The whole system of assessment as adopted meets with little criticism and much commendation from the citizens."

BORES ON BRIDGE SITE UNFAVORABLE

NEW LONDON, Conn.—It is stated that the New Haven road has already expended about $60,000 in its test borings of the bottom of the Thames river and that no bottom suitable for the piers of the proposed new railroad bridge has been secured. It is said that the location which had been picked out for the structure will probably have to be abandoned, leaving the alternative of going farther up the river or else building the new bridge where the old one is.

With the opening of the Panama canal and the holding of the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco, next year, the "sec-America-first" movement may be considerably accelerated. It may be that not a few Europeans will decide then to see America for the first time.

It is predicted that the opening of the Panama canal will prompt a good many American tradesmen to go into storekeeping down that way. While everybody else, as is the custom in the tropics, is enjoying an afternoon "nap," the wide-awake shopman can tidy up his place of business and hang out some new bargain-sale signs to catch the crowd when it is ready to stir abroad once more.

There is merit in the proposition coming from Mexico, to have the soldiers, whenever no one is raising a disturbance, engaged in farming and raising grain and vegetables. Those of their number who are blacksmiths could be employed in beating their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning-hooks, or vice versa, whichever the occasion seemed to require.

Perhaps the presence of approximately 1,000,000 names on the government pension rolls, as legacies of past wars, serves to make President Wilson hesitate to add to the number by throwing an army into Mexico. Wars may come and wars may go, but the pension rolls go on forever.

PARTY REGISTER LAW DISCUSSED BY REPUBLICANS

Members of That Political Organization in Legislature Decide to Vote as Individuals on the Proposed Statute

DIFFERENCES SHOWN

Republican members of the Legislature at an informal meeting after adjournment yesterday decided not to attempt to unite on one side or other on the question of abolition of party enrollment. There was a tacit understanding as the meeting dissolved that each Republican should vote as he pleased on the bill now pending in the Legislature to abolish party enrollment.

A general discussion of the merits of the bill, in which there was a wide difference of opinion expressed, led to a motion by Representative Caro that the meeting go on record in favor of the measure. Subsequently this motion was withdrawn after several members had declared that it would be unwise to attempt to pledge the Republicans when opinions were so diverse.

Representative Beck of Chelsea said that he believed in the existing party enrollment law. Representative Greenwood of Everett said that the law had worked to keep many voters from the polls and that he should vote to repeal it. Representative Hays of Boston favored the enrollment feature. Representative Haines of Medford urged repeal, saying that voters are now practically tagged at the polls.

Representative Drury of Waltham said there was discontent in his district over the enrollment law. Representative Sherburne of Brookline would allow voters to declare at the primary their intention to support a candidate. Representative Chamberlain of Springfield said that there was not strong demand for abolition.

Representative Worrell of Attleboro, criticized Republican leadership. Speaker Cushing said the fundamental difference between Republicans and Democrats was that the Republicans did what they considered was right.

Senator Horgan offered an order in the Senate late yesterday, action on which was deferred until today, that the joint committee on banks and banking investigate savings institutions similar to that conducted by the Henry Siegel Company and report as to what legislation may be necessary to protect the public. An order of similar purport was offered in the House by Representative Doyle of Boston.

The Senate postponed consideration of the immigration resolutions to Wednesday.

The amendment to the savings bank dividends bill reported by the committee on bills in third reading was adopted and further action put over to Wednesday.

Senator Doyle of New Bedford had tabled the adverse committee report on the petition to give every child between the ages of 5 and 16 years the right to attend a public school.

The committee on metropolitan affairs reported that there was no legislation necessary on five special reports of the Boston transit commission on removal of the Boston Elevated structures in Washington street, North and Main streets, Charlestown; tunnel from Boston to Chelsea, station in Washington street tunnel near Bennett street, connection of Dorchester tunnel with South station or additional tunnels in Boston. Representative Lawler of Boston dissents to practically all these adverse reports.

The bill reported favorably in the House by the committee on election laws to abolish oaths and certificates of signers of nomination papers was rejected by a rising vote of 16 to 57 after a debate in which Representative Donovan of Boston, opposing the measure, said that Mayor Curley of Boston would be defeated the next time he sought public office if he aligns himself too closely with the Good Government Association.

The bill was opposed by Representative Lomasney and favored by Representative McMorro.

Adverse report of the committee on taxation on the bill to tax seats in the Boston stock exchange was accepted.

Favorable action was taken on the bill relating to the election of the Taunton city council, the measure being substituted for an adverse committee report.

Adverse report on the bill reducing the time of service under the state retirement system was accepted.

Without debate the House accepted the leave to withdraw report of the committee on public service on the petition to include within the term "veteran" in the statute, persons who have received congressional medals of honor.

The following table shows how the work of the legislative committee of this year to date compares with that of last year at the corresponding time:

Matters referred	1914	1913
Matters reported	2940	2218
Matters not reported	1253	3578
Hearings not closed	1407	918
	288	184

The following committees have closed their hearings on all matters referred to them: Agriculture and public health sitting jointly, constitutional amendments, election laws, fisheries and game, labor and military affairs.

Favorable report has been made in the House by the committee on agriculture on a bill providing that there shall be a night watchman in stables containing more than four horses or mules.

VACATION SCHOOL SOUGHT

WAKEFIELD, Mass.—In his annual report, W. B. Atwell, superintendent of schools, asks the board to establish a vacation school June 1 and July.

NIGHT SCHOOLS FOR ALIENS TO BE EXTENDED

is conceded by all," said W. Stanwood Field, director of night and continuation schools, this morning, "and the public school furnishes the most favorable opportunity for acquainting our aliens with American customs, ideals and institutions. Immigrants arrive in this country in largest numbers during the spring months at or soon after the close of the evening school term. The time of their arrival is the best for getting them into our schools, but in previous years, the schools have not opened for these new arrivals until early in October. During the interim foreigners have become sufficiently sophisticated as not to feel as keenly the need for instruction. When October came and the schools opened, they did not enter."

"The laws of this commonwealth compel those between 16 and 21 years of age who are not able to read and write the English language to attend evening school regularly whenever evening schools are in session. There have been about 5000 of these minors in our evening schools during this term, not including illiterates who are over 21."

"Progress this year has been more marked than in previous years. With the extension of the evening school term, there is excellent promise that a very large number will be able to pass their test by the end of the term."

The extension will be carried on in the Bigelow evening school, Chester H. Wilbar, principal; Bowdoin evening school, with a branch in the William Wirt Warren school, John Carroll, principal; Eliot evening school, Alvin P. Wagg, principal; Franklin evening school with a branch in the Hyde Park high schoolhouse, Joseph F. Gould, principal; Hancock evening school, Joel W. Reynolds, principal; Phillips Brooks evening school, Joseph T. F. Burrell, principal; Quincy evening school, Allan L. Sedley, principal; Theodore Lyman evening school, Frank E. Hobart, principal; Washington evening school, Leonard M. Patton, principal.

One additional first assistant was authorized by the school committee to take charge of the branches in the Bowdoin and Franklin evening schools. Alfred R. Winter was appointed to the position of assistant, head of division, in the continuation school for the remainder of the school year.

Cadets of Dorchester high school are not to be allowed to have a prize drill on the Dunbar avenue grounds on May 8, rules the committee.

Appointment of teachers in rotation from the merit list was brought up by Michael H. Corcoran. At the present time the master of a school and the superintendent have a choice of selection for each appointment from the first three names on the merit list in any of the grades.

A change in the rules so that at least the one standing at the head of the list will be entitled to an explanation of why she was not chosen will probably be made shortly.

A communication from Mayor Curley requested the school committee to assume the expense of heating and lighting the house at Pine bank, Olmstead park, Jamaica Plain, now used as the children's museum.

INAUGURATIONS ARE CONDUCTED IN MAINE CITIES

Highway Reform Urged in Augusta, While Bangor and Saco Mayors Propose Betterments

AUGUSTA, Me.—Mayor Elmer E. Newbert devoted much of his inaugural address here yesterday to reforms in the highway department.

"Our system of highway work is wasteful and archaic and the ideal system calls for a department for the whole city with a single head," he said.

"Such a system should have for its head a trained man, a reasonable salary should be paid and a term of at least three years should be fixed. In this important particular our city charter should be amended by the next Legislature and the people given a chance to pass upon it."

SACO, Me.—The inaugural ceremonies of the Saco city government took place in the city hall yesterday. Mayor Pillsbury urged a year of economy.

BANGOR, Me.—John G. Utterback, elected mayor of Bangor on the independent ticket, was inaugurated yesterday when the new city administration went into effect.

NAVAL MILITIA WILL CELEBRATE

Twelve hundred invitations have been sent out by the commanding officer and officers of the Massachusetts naval militia for the celebration of the twenty-fourth anniversary of its organization to be observed March 28 from 5 p. m. to 9 p. m. at the foot of Commercial street at the end of the Charlestown bridge. The Massachusetts militia was the first organization of its kind in the United States.

Present will be past officers of the militia and other army and naval officers and friends. Following a dinner will be a concert and assembly.

FOUR DEMANDS FOR SAFETY IN FLYING TOLD

Equilibrium, Stability, Control and Adaptability Held to Be Cardinal Requirements, According to J. E. Harriman

EXPLAINS HIS VIEWS

Equilibrium, stability, control and adaptability were set forth as the requirements for safety in any flying machine by J. Emory Harriman in a talk before the Men's Club of the Second Unitarian Society in Brookline last night.

Mr. Harriman declared that there can be no inherent stability during propelled flight, that only when the motor is not running is there a condition of non-propelled flight and that the machine in position for propelled flight is not by any means in the proper form for non-propelled descent.

Mr. Harriman is the inventor of a biplane which he claims meets these requirements. Its wings are pivoted on the body so that they may be raised like the pinions of a bird for descent without power. It is controlled by a central overhead canopy with universal manipulation.

He refutes the assertion that equilibrium is the only thing that pertains to propelled flight. In his machine when the wings are raised the weights are thus lowered below the sustaining surface and thereby he claims is inherent stability gained.

The safety of the present machine according to Mr. Harriman is based wholly upon a condition of constant forward propulsion, upon a non-stop motor, and upon the control of equilibrium.

Equilibrium, he explained, is now obtained and maintained by flexing of wing rear extremities or ailerons. The principle of control in his opinion is like that of balancing the bicycle and the consequence of the cessation of forward propulsion is likewise the same with the aeroplane and the motorcycle.

Mr. Harriman pointed out that the balancing by movements of flexing wing extremities has no precedent in nature. Equilibrium of the present flying machine, he said, is manually maintained by constant attention and instinctive movements in immediate counteraction to any unusual disturbance.

So long as machines are built with fixed horizontal wings, there can be no condition of stability in propelled flight or in soaring descent.

Mr. Harriman said that the natural force of gravitation that tends to pull a flying machine downward during non-propelled descent should be utilized in maintaining a position of inherent stability, in the same manner that the mechanical forces of propulsion, while pulling the machine forward, are utilized in maintaining a position of equilibrium.

The solution in the estimation of Mr. Harriman is propulsion for equilibrium and non-propulsion for inherent stability.

FREE EMPLOYMENT AGENCY FOR LYNN IS RECOMMENDED

Favorable report was made in the House today by the committee on legal affairs on a bill to establish a state free employment agency in the city of Lynn under the jurisdiction of the state bureau of statistics. There are already four such agencies in the commonwealth, located respectively at Boston, Fall River, Worcester and Springfield.

The metropolitan affairs committee reported favorably a resolve providing for the appointment by the Governor of a commission of three to estimate the cost of improving Spot Pond brook.

Adverse report was made by the legal affairs committee on the bill to make March 17 a legal holiday.

CALIFORNIA WAGE LAW PROPOSED

SACRAMENTO, Cal.—An initiative measure which is being circulated in southern California for a place on the November ballot, provides that no adult working person shall receive less than $2.50 a day for his work. A copy of the proposed law has been received at the secretary of state's office.

The law would make it a criminal offense for any employer to pay any person over 18 years of age less than $2.50 a day, while for children under 18 $1.50 a day is made the minimum. It is provided that the employer may pay part of the wages in board and lodging, but that not more than 70 cents a day shall be deducted on this account.

JAS. B. CONNOLLY CRITICIZES RULING

In criticism of the ruling of the ballot law commission in declaring his Democratic nomination papers invalid James B. Connolly, candidate for the Progressive nomination for the twelfth district seat in Congress, declares through an enrolled Progressive he was solicited by friends to try for the Democratic nomination and secured valid signatures as attested by the election commissioners. On the line above where the candidate signs acceptance is a space for party designation. He declared that he interpreted this to mean with what party the candidate was affiliated and wrote Progressive. He says that to have written Democrat as the commission ruled he should have done might have deceived some voters.

SUCCESSORS TO SIEGEL COMPANY ARE INCORPORATED

W. & A. Bacon Co. Receive Certificate—Officers Given—Stock Authorized Is $1,500,000

A certificate of incorporation was issued today by the commission of corporations to the W. & A. Bacon Company, which succeeds to the business of the Henry Siegel Company as a going concern.

The incorporators and officers are: President, Horace Bacon of Boston; vice-president, Fred A. Kerry of Brookline; treasurer and clerk, Augustus Bacon of Boston; directors, Horace Bacon, Augustus Bacon, Bernard Wolf, all of Boston; Fred A. Kerry, Joseph A. Butler, John T. Connor, William Bacon, all of Brookline; Theodore Lussier of Winthrop.

The authorized capital stock is $1,500,000, represented by 5000 shares, preferred, at a par value of $100 a share, and 10,000 shares of common at a par value of $100 a share. Holders of preferred stock are to be first entitled to a fixed dividend of 7 per cent, payable on March 15 and Sept. 15.

There have been issued at the date of the certificate 4000 shares of preferred and 8000 shares of common stock paid for as follows: In cash, 2800 shares of preferred; in fixtures, etc., 1000 shares of common; in merchandise, 1200 shares of preferred and 1200 shares of common; in lease, trademarks, etc., 5400 shares common; in delivery equipment, horses and wagons, 400 shares common.

The new company is authorized to do a general department store business and to manufacture, buy and deal in merchandise, including general dry goods and other articles.

The board of directors may appoint an executive committee of not less than three nor more than four of their number to have general direction of the business.

END OF PARTY ENROLMENT IS RECOMMENDED

present system by which party designation of a voter at the primary is required to be made known has tended to keep many from the polls. On the other hand, the enrolment system has been upheld as minimizing the opportunity to "pack" a primary with voters of an opposing party for the purpose of nominating a weak opposition candidate.

Mr. McMorro says he has tried to embody in the bill features which will meet the objections to the enrolment system and at the same time make it impracticable to "pack" the opponents' caucus. It is provided that all voters at a primary election shall receive the same kind of a ballot without making known to what party they belong.

Each party represented at the election has a separate column on the ballot in which the names of all its candidates appear. The voter is required to confine his voting to the candidates of a single party. If crosses are placed in more than one column the ballot will be declared invalid.

The committee was divided as follows:

For the bill, Senator Chase, Republican, Senate chairman, and Senator Brennan of Cambridge and Representatives McMorro, Gulbride and Phelan, Democrats, and Representative Guernsey, Progressive.

Opposed, Senator Hobbs, Republican, and Representatives Sherburne, House chairman, Hays, Worrall and Felton, all Republicans.

MARGARET FOLEY TELLS OF WORK FOR SUFFRAGE

Miss Margaret Foley, who has just returned from Pennsylvania, where she has been helping in campaign work under the auspices of the State Equal Suffrage Association, said yesterday that the outlook in Pennsylvania was good if the question was presented to the people properly before 1915, when it goes to the voters.

Among the meetings at which Miss Foley spoke were the annual convention of the United Mine Workers of America in Pittsburgh, the Teachers Institute in Wilkesbarre, women's clubs, factory gatherings, trade unions, parlor meetings and men's clubs. At one factory meeting of about 500 more than 100 persons signed the cards of membership to the woman suffrage organization in less than five minutes. At other meetings an average of half of the audience signed.

Miss Foley has received invitations to help in the campaign work in Montana, Nevada, New Jersey, and the suffragists of St. Louis have asked for her in May. It is probable, however, she will remain in Massachusetts, as she is planning outdoor meetings in Greater Boston.

SALEM COMMERCE CHAMBER PLANNED

SALEM, Mass.—At the annual meeting of the Board of Trade last evening it was voted to consolidate with the Civic League of Salem in an organization to be known as the Salem Chamber of Commerce and Civics. It was also planned to widen Bridge street to a uniform width of 70 feet.

Every lover of the beautiful in historic reproductions should visit our OAK ROOM devoted entirely to Tudor, Elizabethan, Stuart, Charles II and William and Mary Furniture.

The Master Furniture Makers of today are showing by their choice replicas the wonderful beauty of the Jacobean Period—combining as it does the influence of the Italian, Spanish, French and Flemish Renaissance.

All these different models in Oak furniture, comprising over 300 individual sample pieces, are assembled and artistically grouped on the Third Floor. The interior of this wide space is finished in Cathedral oak paneling to harmonize with the exhibit, while many Oriental rugs and shaded electric drop lights add to the attractiveness of the room. ## CHICAGO WOMEN EXPECT TO POLL 300,000 VOTES

Enrolment Today Marks Close of a Campaign in Which a Determined Contest Has Been Waged to Justify New Law

PLAN TO ADD 142,000

CHICAGO—The second opportunity to become registered voters since the passage of the Illinois equal suffrage act is open to the women of Chicago today and suffrage leaders estimate that by tonight 300,000 women will be on the list of registered voters.

When the women had their first opportunity to register a month ago 158,000 of them took advantage of it. About 400,000 Chicago men are eligible voters.

Today's registration has been preceded by scores of mass meetings throughout the city. They have been conducted by many women's organizations in theaters and public halls. Several women candidates for alderman in the April election have been addressing the meetings.

Those who are on the voting list when registration closes tonight will be eligible to vote in the April election, although the constitutionality of the law that gave them the ballot about a year ago is still in doubt.

Illinois women obtained equal suffrage through an amendment to the state constitution. It was signed by Governor Dunne and subsequently went on to the statute books. But a question of its constitutionality was soon raised and finally found its way to the supreme court. The court, however, has announced that its decision would not be reached until some time in April, and as the Chicago election comes early in the month the women are to vote.

Miss Harriet Vittum, of ward 17, president of the Woman's City Club and head resident of the Northwestern University settlement, will run for alderman as an independent with the backing of the Progressives.

DENVER URGES DRESS REFORM

Women belonging to Congress of Mothers issue an appeal

Simplicity in dress has been promised by fashion designers for several seasons, but that it has not appeared rapidly enough to satisfy the women of Denver is evidenced by a letter which has been sent out by the Denver Council of the Colorado Congress of Mothers to the retail merchants and manufacturers.

This movement for dress reform includes not only styles for women, but deals largely with the idea of securing more sensible dresses for school girls. Denver women have agitated the question of dress reform for several years and have taken this means of showing their disapproval of the growing tendency among young girls to bedeck themselves in the extreme of fashion in their attendance at school.

The plan is to induce the manufacturers to make more sensible, practical dresses; and, as it is a well known fact that buyers in dry goods stores do much toward molding the desires of the trade for different styles, it is hoped that they will feature styles more in keeping with the desires of the congress.

Favorable replies have been received from the merchants, and they have given the assurance of their hearty cooperation in any reform which has a systematic backing, and the women are so in earnest in this reform that they have announced that they intend to make a national agitation of this subject and send letters asking the cooperation of the mothers' congresses in all states where the organization is active.

Not only does this congress ask that the clothing should be more appropriate for school wear, but that it should be more comfortable and artistic than that which is worn by the majority at the present time. To give prominence to this class of merchandise, the women of the congress, at the request of the merchants, are arranging a special exhibition of dresses for spring which are in accordance with the ideas of the mothers. The letter which has been sent out by the congress to the merchants is as follows:

"There is a demand for simpler and more practical dresses for women and girls and for styles that will be more helpful, modest and artistic. The Denver district of the Colorado Congress of Mothers has taken action regarding this matter on request that the designers and manufacturers place upon the market garments that will conform more satisfactorily to the growing demand for clothing that will be more comfortable, satisfactory, sensible and appropriate.

"For instance, the extremely narrow skirts are objectionable to many women. They are inartistic and uncomfortable. A skirt of medium width is in great demand. We believe that the factories should supply the demand of the purchaser and place such garments in the shops. An exhibition of the new and simple dress will be held this summer."

FASHION AND STYLE NOT SAME

Latter defined as fitness in dress

Fashion and style are entirely different. For instance, fashion is impersonal, but style quickens into personality. Fashion proposes, but style adapts. Style is fashion thus adapted, plus manner, poise, bearing—plus the woman who wears.

That is a long definition, but it is really the right meaning of style, says Grace Margaret Gould in the Woman's Home Companion. Clothes are but designs, a mere bundle of duds after all, no matter how luxurious. When properly worn by the proper person at the proper time, they become costumes, stylish costumes.

In a word, style is fitness in dress. Style makes the worn fresh and the old new. A dowdy, however lavishly dressed, is always a dowdy. She has no sense of smartness, which is the very essence of style.

You know there is that good old saying about seeing ourselves as others see us. Well, the trouble with most women is that they are too busy in seeing others to think that others are seeing them.

It is different with Fashion. She never discriminates. Her motto is "A dress for everybody and everybody for the dress." All she exacts is that her followers shall not think for themselves. But today women are less pliant than they were. Some women, many women, in fact, are beginning to think without the aid of Dame Fashion.

Fashion likes to go from one extreme to the other. She has a kindly feeling for the dress designers. It was not very long ago that she said "Let the lines of the figure be frankly revealed. Curves are artistic. Do everything possible to emphasize them."

Now her newest edict is: "No hips, no waist, no shoulders; just a bagginess, and a general drooping effect."

Fashion has a good memory. She recalls her former triumphs and longs to do it again. She now plans to have the bustle again. She even dares to wish for the hoop skirt, but in this she is going a bit too far. The minaret tunic, with its many variations, is a fashion that she has successfully launched, but to the tyranny of the uncertain hoop skirt the American woman defiantly says "Never, never again."

But styles are changing. This spring it will be the Japanese effect at the neck and, in skirts, the Japanese tunic and the bustle.

All the traditions about collars of good and regular standing in the past will be broken this spring. Not to fit—that is the slogan of the new spring collars. It is the Japanese collar we are to wear if we expect to be very fashionable, and this stands out from the neck at the back and at the sides, and in the front there is the low-cut neck line. It is in these Japanese neck-effects that one must be very careful not to go to extremes.

The fact that draperies are moving toward the back has done much to make bustle effects the mode. The first of the bustle skirts show very effective draperies. For the abruptness and weight of the old-time bustle they have substituted grace and lightness. In many of the skirts the new bustle forms the back of a short tunic.

The Japanese tunic effect will be a leader among tunics this spring. It consists of a long sash-like drapery at the back of the skirt which is turned up at the bottom to form a loop. This Japanese tunic is often used in connection with a short minaret tunic which shows only at the front and sides.

There are to be tunics and still more tunics this spring, and flounces—some plaited, some straight and some spiral—and also draperies, and many, many skirts in the "peg-top" effect.

The average skirt will be made with an inside belt, which is usually from one to one and a half inches high.

Every variation that one can possibly think of in the minaret style will be

ORANGE FRITTER A GOOD DESSERT

An excellent orange fritter suitable either for luncheon or for a dessert for dinner may be made by adding to the plain fritter batter an extra egg and extra sugar, the grated peel of one orange and half a cupful of candied orange peel, says the Country Gentleman. This should be served with a hot orange sauce made from the juice and peel of another orange, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one cupful of sugar and one tablespoonful of cornstarch. The sugar, butter and cornstarch should be thoroughly blended, the grated peel added with one cupful of boiling water. Cook until it is clear and then turn in the strained juice of the orange. When this is slightly cold add to it a cupful of thick, rich cream which has been whipped dry, and serve with the fritters.

FOR THE COOK

Creamed cauliflower served in green shells makes a dish as tasty as it is satisfying to the eye.

Tomatoes filled with minced pineapple, celery and chopped nuts mixed with mayonnaise make a delicious salad.

When eggs are broken and can not be used at once, they will keep much better if the shells are removed and a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt beaten in for each egg.

If eggs are placed in hot water, for a few seconds before breaking, the whites will separate from the yolks very easily. They must be cooled before whipping up the whites.

The cook will find it a convenience to have a belt fastened around the waist. To each side front of this belt is fastened a strip that reaches to the knees. On the end of each strip is fastened a quilted holder.—Dallas News.

SKIRT TWO INCHES OFF GROUND

Other features of the spring modes

There is much discussion at present in regard to the length of skirts. In America the skirt two inches from the ground will be a favorite length. Quite a number of the skirts are shorter in the back than in the front.

The kimono sleeve will reign. It doesn't make a particle of difference whether it is an old story or not, writes Grace Margaret Gould in the Woman's Home Companion. The raglan sleeve, which gives the long shoulder effect, will also be used, and the mandarin sleeve, which has its armhole starting at the waist line. The average sleeve will be three quarters length. A number of waists, however, will be made with longer sleeves in modified bishop effect. For women who feel that the sleeve cut in one with the body of the waist is unbecoming, a regulation sleeve may be adopted, but in this case, to have it at all up-to-date the armhole must be larger than it was last year.

Coats—that is suit coats—are to be shorter and cut up in front, and there is a definite reason and a good one for this decision. Now that the drapery has moved up in skirts and we are aiming for a very full effect at the hips, it is quite wise to have the new coats short and flaring so that the fullness of the skirts can be accommodated and not be crushed.

The tailored suit jacket will be so short that it will reach to the curve of the hip line. Bolero and Eton effects will be seen, and there will also be many short jackets that will have the fronts hung straight from the bust line to the edge of the jacket.

The newest short coats will have the ripple effect at the lower edge, and this same ripple effect will show in a pronounced way in the many short tunics of the skirts.

In fabrics and designs oriental effects still predominate. Printed patterns are seen more than brocades. Among the favored materials are Egyptian crepe, satin, nocturne, which shows a raised pebble effect, the tango crepe and the new cotton corduroy fabric called golfine, which has a velvety texture.

Japanese blue will be one of the favorite colors. It resembles peacock-blue. In fact it is astonishing how at the beginning of every new season so many blues are spoken of as favorites. Two very intense blues are imperial and Titian. Then there is a lovely soft blue called Romney. Eco blue is bright and light; it reminds one of old-time sky-blue.

Many tan and old-gold shades will be seen, and a very odd biscuit tone that has a greenish tinge will be fashionable as a trimming touch. Gray with a faintly yellow tone, combined with canary-yellow, is a favored French color combination.

Sashes, which will be the height of style, show many Roman stripes and there will also be many tango red sashes with tassels ends. Marigold and many varying shades of red-browns will be featured. There will be a brick or tango red, many of them used in combination with a touch of blue.

For an odd trimming note nothing can equal the new buttons for spring. Some of them are very large. These are made of tinted wood with odd-shaped splashes of color introduced. There are also buttons that look like buckles and other buttons which are in the form of fruits. Some of the fruit buttons represent a plate showing different kinds of fruit.

SPRING DISH

Get out into the open or on the hills this spring. Go with the children and let them gather the young tops and leaves of the abundant wild mustard. When you wish to serve it, wash it thoroughly in several waters, then quickly immerse in boiling, salted water and cook until tender (about 25 minutes), strain off all water, cut up small and serve with butter, lemon juice and sliced eggs (cooked hard).—Los Angeles Express.

FABRIC BUCKLES

Buckles continue to simulate some usefulness in midday's costume, judging by the way they persistently cling to bodice, skirt and even the coat, says the St. Paul Dispatch. Especially popular as a finish to gowns and wraps of all kinds of materials are buckles covered with the same fabric. These buckle frames in various sizes may be bought for 15 cents apiece.

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT

Beetle Who Didn't Give Up

It was one of the fine sights of a day in vacation. Though the hero was only a beetle, many a boy might well copy his example. With a deal of hard work the big, black fellow had gathered a large ball of dirt and was rolling it along. Bracing his fore feet against the ground, he was pushing the load with his hind feet. Rather a blind way it seemed, and I wasn't surprised when the ball rolled into a hollow and stuck there. In vain the beetle pushed; he couldn't get it out. But instead of giving up, as I have known a boy to do when a task was hard, the little general climbed to the top of the ball to study the situation. Choosing the side where the rim of the hollow was lowest, he went down again to his work. He pushed with all his might, but to no purpose. Then another survey from the top and a new plan was adopted. Getting his hind feet under the load and straightening his back like an athlete lifting, he managed to raise the ball just a little. Then with his fore feet he pulled a bit of dirt into the hollow, thus raising the ball a little higher. And with a new push out it came, and he went on his way rejoicing, bringing his load with him.—Congregationalist.

CHECKED SUIT FOR MILD DAYS SCARFS WHICH SERVE AS WRAPS

White waistcoat gives a dainty touch

Checked and plaid broadcloths that are not aggressive in design make beautiful suits for the first mild days. This one is finished with revers of velvet and vest and collar of white silk duvetyne. The color of the cloth is a warm tan.

The drapery that falls just below the coat line indicating the breadth of hip that is so fashionable makes a good feature and the straight lines of the coat give an essentially youthful effect.

The same model would be handsome reproduced in any seasonable material, the gabardine that is to be so much worn, silk and wool duvetyne, the more durable serge and similar materials.

The white waistcoat gives a dainty touch, but a great many broadcloth and flowered materials will be used for such purposes.

Among novelties is cotton duvetyne in really wonderful oriental colorings and the fabric promises to be a favorite for trimmings of the kind.

The skirt is made in two pieces, the left side being draped while the right is plain.

The coat is slightly longer at the back than at the front and is perfectly plain below the waist line with just a little fullness at the upper portion.

For the medium size, the coat will require 4 1/2 yds. of material 27, 2 1/2 yds. 44 or 2 yds. 52 in. wide; the skirt 4 yds. 27, 3 yds. 44 or 62.

The pattern of the coat (8017) is cut in sizes from 34 to 44 inches bust measure; of the skirt (8014) from 22 to 30 waist. They can be bought at any May Manton agency, or will be sent by mail. Address 102 West Thirty-second street, New York, or Masonic Temple, Chicago.

TRIED RECIPES

ROAST LAMB OR YEARLING STUFFED

While it is easily possible to have the bone taken out of the leg and loin of lamb and the cavity cut open with the boned loin bound over the opening, after stuffing, by tape or nice cotton twine, thus allowing a good and ample pocket for stuffing in a hindquarter, still it is equally possible to take out the shoulder blade and bones from a forequarter and also produce a very nice stuffed roast, which will cost very much less. Not only does the forequarter weigh less, but also at the much lower cost per pound we often find it will give as much as we require at about one half the cost of the hindquarter. While we would have more meat to use in the hind, for a large family, the economy will not be so great as the difference in price per pound signifies, still for a small family the hindquarter of a good yearling will usually last too long.

ORIGINAL ESCALLOPED OYSTERS.

This delicious dish was originally made when dishes were more costly, and so they were baked in large shells of the scallop, which made very appropriate individual sections for serving as taken from the oven. To make in this manner we must first prepare buttered crumbs.

Use either bread or cracker crumbs and for every eight tablespoons of crumbs allow one tablespoonful of butter. Melt the butter in a saucepan and turn the crumbs in, stirring until they are coated evenly with the butter. Next look the oysters over carefully for bits of shell, having first drained them and saved the liquor, and then wash with one-half cup of water. Butter the pan or shell or little ramekin lightly and sprinkle with a thin layer of crumbs. On this put a layer of oysters and season with pepper and salt. Moisten slightly with the oyster liquor and cream or rich milk or either alone. Cover with crumbs, season and pour on all the milk that will be readily taken up by the crumbs. For shells we seldom get any large enough for more than one layer of oysters. When we use dishes, add another layer of oysters and a layer of crumbs on the top. This would give us three layers of crumbs and two layers of oysters. Cook until the crumbs brown on the top, but there is no damage to lift out an oyster to see if properly done, being careful not to break up the top layer more than necessary.

For escalloped oysters a moderately hot oven is desirable, and also they should stand for at least 40 minutes after they are prepared, so that the moisture and flavor may blend well throughout the mass. If on shells it is best to place the shells in a square, shallow tin, so as to handle easily in putting in and taking from the oven.

CRANBERRY FRITTERS

Beat one egg light, add one cupful of milk, one tablespoonful of sugar and one cupful of flour sifted with one teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat well, and stir in one cupful of thick, rich cranberry sauce. If too thick add more milk. Drop in spoonfuls on a hot buttered griddle and brown lightly. Serve with butter and powdered sugar.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

MIXED SUITS

The combinations of material seem to be unlimited this spring, both as to kinds and colors, says the Newark News. A handsome suit seen recently is composed of a taffeta gown with a moire tunic and coat. Another costume has a tunic and vest of Roman stripe faille with a coat and dress of navy blue gabardine.

Scarves so broad that they answer for lightweight theater wraps are being made up in white and pale shades of double width charmeuse. Two yards of this soft material is shirred along one of its long edges into a collar band, the two ends form the straight-falling fronts and the three edges are bordered with white, black or taupe awansdown, says the Washington Herald.

Another model in scarf mantles is fashioned to form a hood effect at the back and long scarf ends in front while the neck is defined by a narrow ruching or ostrich feather flues.

More expensive scarf mantles are in net or chiffon embroidered with tinsel paillettes or colored and iridescent beads, of white or black Chantilly lace trimmed with ostrich feathers, awansdown or fur, and of liberty satin and metallic brocaded chiffon.

HOME HELPS

When laying linoleum, if you would have it smooth, let it lie in place and be walked over for a few days before tacking down.

Soak ink stains in sour milk; and should a stain remain, rinse in a weak solution of chloride of lime.

Soot may easily be swept from carpets by sprinkling lavishly with salt before sweeping.

Tarnished articles of brass when washed in the water in which potatoes have been boiled will be as bright as new.

Grease spots on marble may be removed by applying powdered magnesia.—New York Press.

NOVEL TRIMMING

A novel blouse decoration seen recently is a simulated bead necklace done in colored embroidery, says the Newark News. The blouse is of crepe white Georgette cloth—that chiffon-like material which promises so great a popularity this spring. It is very simply made with a round neck and fastens in the back. The necklace chosen for imitation consists of long, graduated, amber beads alternating with black ones and finishing in front with a large black disk and tassel. The embroidery is padded and the effect is an excellent imitation of the real beads.

VOGUE OF TASSEL

The glory of the tassel as the one acceptable finish for girdle ends, sashes and the ends of drapery has in no way diminished; rather we are promised the sight of them in still greater use as the prevalence of filmy materials in spring garments will require the heavy tassels to serve as weights to the fluttering points of collars, ruffles and draperies.—St. Paul Dispatch.

RATES OF 7000 PHONE USERS IN VERMONT ORDERED CUT

New England Company to Appeal From Public Service Board Ruling for Reduction of About $3 in Annual Rate for Six or More Parties

BRATTLEBORO, Vt.—Reduction in the rates of 7000 telephone subscribers in Vermont is ordered in the report of the public service commission with one member dissenting.

The average reduction is a little less than $3 a year and affects only those lines on which there are six or more parties. The commission believes the toll rates "are reasonable and should not be disturbed."

The order becomes effective within 30 days and applies to the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, three of its subsidiaries—the Vermont Telephone and Telegraph Company of Montpelier, the Franklin County Telephone Company of St. Albans, the Champlain Valley Telephone Company of Brandon and one independent company, the Springfield Local Telephone Company of Springfield.

An appeal from the order will be made by the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company. Vice-President E. K. Hall of the company said that the reduction "would practically wipe out every dollar of net revenue now earned in Vermont." The company may appeal to the Vermont supreme court or bring a bill in equity in the federal court.

The Springfield company, the only independent affected, has 126 subscribers and is ordered to reduce its rate of $18 for farmers' residences to $15. The commission finds that the company declared a 300 per cent stock dividend in 1912.

The New England Telephone and Telegraph Company is ordered to reduce its rate of $18 for six-party residence line and for a party farmer line of 15 or more to $15. The majority report declares that the inventory showed an excessive valuation of property.

The Vermont Company, a subsidiary of the New England, is ordered to reduce its rate of $25 for a four-party business service to $24, and the rate of $18 for a six-party residence and 15 or more party farmer line to $15.

The Franklin County Company is ordered to reduce from $24 for a six-party business line in group 7 exchanges to $21; from $21 in group 2 exchanges to $18; from $18 for six-party residences to $15; from $19.80 and $16.80 on 15-party farmer lines to $18 and $15, respectively.

The Champlain Valley Company is ordered to reduce its rate of $21 for six-party business lines and 15 or more party lines to $18.

The Passumpsic Telephone Company was dismissed without any reductions. The same decision was rendered in the case of the Western Telephone and Telegraph Company.

W. R. Warner, the dissenting member, points out that the New England company introduced a large amount of evidence which has not been refuted and which must be given credence. He says he is unable to find that less working capital is required for the operation of the New England and its subsidiary plants, and he cannot agree that 6 per cent is a fair rate of return on investments in a public utility of this character.

The rate of return, he holds, should be upon the physical valuation of the property, and some allowance should be made for fluctuations in revenues.

The investigation of telephone rates was started June 4, 1913.

Vice-President's Views

In a statement discussing the order of the Vermont public service commission reducing telephone rates, Vice-President Hall of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company says:

"There seem to be four possible courses open to the company:

"1.—To acquiesce in the majority decision of the commission and undertake to have the loss on its Vermont business carried by the telephone-using public of the other states. Under this proposition the company would be furnishing certain grades of service in Vermont at lower rates than the company would be charging for the same grades of service furnished under similar conditions in other states.

"2.—If, on the other hand, the company should adopt for similar grades of service in similar communities in the other states the reductions proposed by the majority of the commission, the aggregate loss in the company's revenue would more than wipe out the small margin now resulting from the total business of the company.

"3.—To acquiesce in the majority decision of the commission and undertake to reduce the expense of furnishing service in the state of Vermont to a point commensurate with the revenue collected in the state. This course, the company believes, is not desired by the people of Vermont.

"4.—The only other alternative, as the officers of the company see it, is to appeal to the courts for a hearing on the merits. Pending the decision of the courts the company will continue the same high grade of service in the state of Vermont which is now being furnished."

AMHERST TOPICS HELP FARMER IN HIS DAILY TASKS

Field Crops, Farm Management, Dairying, Poultry, Fruit and Forestry Are All Included in Discussions

BETTER RESULTS AIM

AMHERST, Mass.—Farmers week at the state agricultural college is in session today. Conferences cover half a dozen lines of activity, including field crops, farm management, dairying, poultry, fruit, floriculture, market gardening, forestry, home economics and community development.

Economical use of fertilizers, an important problem of the modern farmer; opportunities for sheep raising in this state, orcharding, and community organization were taken up at the opening meetings yesterday. The growing of potatoes and spraying practice, Ayshire and Jersey cattle, continuation of the apple problems, and benefits of mutual assistance are being discussed today.

P. M. Harwood, general agent of the dairy bureau of the state board of agriculture, will speak this afternoon. He will deal largely with the work that is being done under his direction for the encouragement of dairying.

The opening talk was by Prof. J. A. McLean in Grinnell arena on sheep. New England, he said, is naturally a sheep country. The faults for scarcity of sheep here he pointed out included the neglect of what flocks there are and the presence of dogs.

H. D. Haskins treated the subject of fertilizers from an economical standpoint, stating that New England uses about $3,000,000 worth annually. He discussed fully several questions: "Do we use in our fertilizers the proper proportions of the different constituents?" "Do we always use the most economical fertilizer possible?" "Do we use the desired result with different crops?"

Dr. J. K. Shaw of the Massachusetts experimental station discussed "The choice of varieties in apples."

Professor Sears gave a lecture on the buying of nursery stock. The first part of this lecture was a discussion of northern versus southern grown nursery stock, followed by an enumeration of the many advantages of locally grown stock in particular.

Section 6 on community development had the head of the division, Prof. E. L. Morgan, extension professor of community organization of Massachusetts Agricultural College, for the first speaker of the week.

In the absence of Dr. T. N. Carver, who was the scheduled evening speaker, C. W. Thompson brought a message from the rural organization service on the subject, "Some problems in rural organization—the rural exodus."

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Members of the Wennerberg Association in Minneapolis have learned that the statue of Gunnar Wennerberg to be unveiled in Minneapolis during the saengerfest in June has reached New York, the Dispatch announces.

The statue will be placed on some site in the Mill City yet to be selected, in memory of the famous Swedish musician and composer. Funds have been solicited by the association until nearly all the required $15,000 has been raised.

(Special to the Monitor)
LONDON—It is easy enough to realize what made Devon men mariners, how the men of Bristol became slavers, and why the Cornishmen took to wrecking. All that is part of the evolution of the great kingdom of the West Saxons. But when one asks the reason for that love of independence and rebellion against tradition which came to characterize the men of Buckinghamshire, the answer is not so simple. Buckle used to say that the men born and bred on the uplands, amidst the avalanches and the torrents, grew up in the nature of things superstitious. So it might be argued that the men born and bred in the uplands, rolling perpetually against the gray skies, have grown up naturally as free as the wind swelling up out of the bottoms and roaring as it listeth along the Chiltern ridges. Anyway there is scarcely a corner of the county unconnected with the name of some soldier of freedom:

"Yours are Hampden's, Russell's glory, Sidney's matchless fame is yours. Martyrs in heroic story. Worth a thousand Agincourts."

Of all these names not one is better known than that of William Penn, the man who earned fame and position by what must, in his day, have seemed the hopeless sacrifice of fame and position for conscience sake. To be a Quaker in Penn's day was to be an outcast. His leader, Fox, was making the circuit of the jails of England, whilst cavalier and Puritan alike, in arms for liberty of worship for themselves, were in arms against liberty of worship for any one else.

It was the steadfast adherence, in such circumstances, of the "friend" of the seventeenth century to his principles that makes Jordans what it is today to everyone capable of understanding single-heartedness and self-sacrifice. It is at once the Mecca and the Westminster of the "friends," but there is no green turban to entice the faithful, and no soaring columns or wealth of tracery to satisfy the eyes of the tourist.

The little brick meeting-house stands in the shadow of the woods, in the depths of a Buckinghamshire bottom, with the uplands lifting like Atlantic rollers all around it. There is not another building in sight of it, and only the creaking of a farm wagon or the pant of an occasional motor car breaks the silence. The building stands back from the crossroads across its little grass churchyard, under the very branches of the beech trees interlaced all about it. It is in the very center of the Buckinghamshire free country. One road runs to Beaconsfield, the home of Burke himself. Another lifts over the hill to the village of Penn on a distant ridge. The other two roads run to the Chalfonts: Chalfont St. Giles, where Milton had his cottage, and where Fleetwood, the regicide, had his house "the Vache," a whitewashed farm when John was king; and Chalfont St. Peters, where Isaac Pennington, republican mayor of London, and lieutenant of the Tower held those early Quaker services in the Grange.

For some two and a half centuries the "friends" have flocked through the Buckinghamshire lanes to the whitewashed room, with its rough wooden benches, as gaunt and unadorned as the upper chambers depicted by the brushes of the old masters. They came there when Jeffries was in temporary lodgings in Pennington's house at Chalfont St. Peters, and in spite of all the efforts made by the bishop and the presbytery they are tramping there still.

SAUGUS—An appropriation of $4000 to purchase a playground of 12 acres in Cliftondale was voted down last night at the largest attended town meeting in the history of Saugus.

WAKEFIELD—M. E. S. Clemons, town counsel, not only lost a salary increase that had been voted him a week ago, but several others found that the recommendations of the finance committee for larger pay for them were turned down when the citizens gathered in town meeting last night.

The meeting was the largest in years, due largely to the interest in the proposed increase in the pay of Chief of Police James J. Pollard. One week ago he lost, by a majority of two votes, a raise from $1200 to $1500. A motion to reconsider was lost last night, 235 to 208.

EVERETT—A change in the form of the city council by an amendment to the city charter was proposed last evening which, if adopted, would abolish the common council and establish a single board of 15 members.

DETROIT TO PLACE RESPONSIBILITY OF SCHOOL BUILDINGS

DETROIT—Plans are being considered by the school board to concentrate responsibility in having new school buildings constructed according to specifications, by placing their erection under the direct supervision of William G. Malcolmson, school board architect. Captain Stewart, who has had this task in the past, would then be responsible only for the maintenance and inspection of completed schools, the Free Press explains.

A junket of inspectors is being considered to gain further information on school building problems.

SAN ANTONIO A U. S. POST CARD DEPOT

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—"Number, 6-200,000; weight, 42,640 pounds." That is the bill of lading on one shipment of postal cards from Washington for San Antonio postoffice, the Express reports.

The supply of postal cards already on hand in the local office amounted to approximately 5,000,000. As San Antonio is the official postal card center of all the Southwest, distributing as many as a million in one consignment occasionally, the additional tons of matter bearing the "U. S." stamp will hardly be stored very long.

POLICEMEN OF REVERE VOTED SALARY RAISE

Patrolmen Are Increased From $3 to $3.24 a Day and Sergeants From $3.25 to $3.50 at the Annual Town Meeting

OTHER PLACES ACTIVE

Town meetings were held in many parts of the state yesterday and were marked by record attendances. In Revere the citizens voted to accept the recommendation of the finance committee, providing for an increase in pay for patrolmen and sergeants of the police department.

In passing a police budget of $28,630, the voters provided for an increase from $3 to $3.24 a day for patrolmen, and from $3.25 to $3.50 for three sergeants. At present there are 20 patrolmen, two sergeants and two lieutenants.

QUINCY—Having pared the estimates of the city departments about $10,000, the finance committee reported the annual budget at a meeting of the council last night. The total amount of the budget is $537,977.94, an increase of about $29,000 over last year.

During a discussion of the budget a resolve was adopted asking the city solicitor to give an opinion at the next meeting as to whether the mayor has the right to revise or change the estimate asked for by the school department.

SAUGUS—An appropriation of $4000 to purchase a playground of 12 acres in Cliftondale was voted down last night at the largest attended town meeting in the history of Saugus.

SOUTH HADLEY, Mass.—At the town meeting here yesterday of 670 votes cast 26 were by women. To secure a clear understanding of the town's accounts an adjourned meeting is to be held in four weeks.

PALMER, Mass.—For highway surveyor, Charles T. Brainerd was reelected, at town meeting, defeating Charles E. Fuller. The appropriation meeting will be held Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the town house.

RATIONAL GOLF

By STEVEN ARMSTRONG

In our last article we did not finish dealing with women's golf during the year 1912, so must run rapidly over the events we omitted.

The metropolitan title, somewhat to every one's surprise, was not retained by Miss Lillian B. Hyde, and her successor proved to be the runner-up of the previous year, Mrs. Victor Earle, who defeated a newcomer, Miss Marion Hollins destined greatly to distinguish herself before long in American golf. Just to show the veterans were well represented, Miss Georgianna Bishop captured the medal round with 80.

In the eastern, Mrs. R. H. Barlow again had things all her own way. It is a curious point about this method of deciding the eastern by medal play, that the title has lain among three people only during the 10 years of its existence, Mrs. E. C. Wheeler holding it twice, Miss F. C. Osgood three times and this was Mrs. Barlow's second victory, which as time was to show was followed by a third one in succession (1913). But I am anticipating.

A still more curious point is that with the Misses Curtis, Miss Bishop, Miss Harley, all national champions, and in the case of the Misses Curtis, frequently first or second in the qualifying round of the U. S. G. A. tournament, none of these players have carried off the eastern. One might draw strange conclusions from these circumstances regarding the respective merits of deciding championships by match or by medal play. The former seems to give every one more chance of doing well, and for that reason is possibly the fairer test, speaking generally. The medal play ability is evidently of the nature of a gift granted to some people.

That is one great point in favor of the Ladies Golf Union system of Great Britain. Handicaps are decided entirely on score play, and to have a low handicap carries with it much honor because of the standard system of pars, so that all are handicapped from the best the British champion can do. Whereas the championship and also the Scottish, Irish and English national tournaments are decided by match play. So the brilliant medalist has an equal opportunity of distinguishing herself with the great match player, whether the former ever is able to carry off the championship or not.

In the Philadelphia for 1912 Mrs. Barlow, as was expected, proved invincible once more.

Over in the West we again find Miss Painter to the fore. In the W. W. G. A. championship final she found a worthy opponent in a young player who later added to her growing reputation in the national, Miss Ruth Chisholm of Cleveland shows great promise. In the Chicago championship Miss Painter defeated Miss Layman, like herself a fine exponent of the short game, and in California Miss Cheesborough won again, meeting in the final Mrs. Kennett, better known as Miss Isabel Smith. Mrs. Whitcombe defended her Wisconsin title successfully.

In the southern Mrs. F. Jones took first place, while in the North and South tournament Mrs. J. R. Price was the winner. The Pacific Northwest fell to an American this time, through Miss A. Warner's fine golf. Her name is one of the few new ones we find in the championships which are not national events. Another is that of Miss Nesbitt in the Ontario, although this player was already well-known outside of Canada. In the Boston invitation tournament the previous year she was defeated on the home green on the final of the second eight by Mrs. G. W. Roope, who in 1912 carried off the championship of the Boston Association.

This finishes up 1912, a year in which we see new names coming forward in the big events, with just enough former title holders keeping their places to make us feel that they must be reckoned with still. It is really curious looking down the list for the next year to see how coming events cast their shadows before, and 1911 and 1912 seem in ladies' golf to lead up naturally to 1913. One cannot help wondering what the present year is to bring forth.

The New Silhouette

shows the skirt "plus femme," as the French say: meaning that in flounces, draperies and frills a woman appears more womanlike than in the straight and severe tailored mode.

The new fashion, is decidedly in favor of the slim figure, although the stout woman can wear the new models successfully if she is properly corseted.

La Vida Corsets

are distinguished by their long-wearing, imported materials, daintiness of trimming and graceful contour. The new La Vida corsets are supple, low of bust, close and smooth of hip, and without rigidity. They retain their resiliency and are rustproof.

The La Vida for the slender figure has very few bones. The stout woman's La Vida does not make the mistake of being "boneless," but gives proper support.

La Vida Corsets are $3.50 and up.

Peru Condemns Oligarchy Argentina Awaits Royalty

LIMA HEARS CONSTITUTION PRAISED AT BIG GATHERING

Those Successful in Overthrowing President Billinghurst Meet in Banquet Hall He Used to Frequent and Discuss Plans for the New Government

LIMA, Peru.—In the identical banquet hall of the zoological park restaurant where on many occasions the deposed President, Guillermo Billinghurst, used to receive the homage of his adherents, the successful opponents to the Billinghurst administration met the other evening to celebrate what the many speakers termed the maintenance of the constitution.

At first glance it would have been difficult to realize that the festive gathering was the outcome and effect of a revolution, a coup d'état that sent a President into exile, and overturned completely a regime that had been looked upon as adamant. Needless to say that the principal actors in the political events of only a few days before were present to give account of their action regarding the dethronement of the chief executive of the republic.

Sr. Luis Pardo, president of the National Club, in a speech that rang with patriotic feeling, asked his hearers to join in a movement that, once for all, would make impossible any arbitrary rule on the part of a Peruvian President. Special attention centered on Srs. Jorge and Manuel Prado y Ugarteche for their disinterested labor in behalf of the reform movement. Col. Oscar Benavides, the acknowledged leader of the party in control, spoke of his part in the revolutionary movement, and said that he hoped the result achieved justified the means employed.

Many other military men expressed themselves in terms of loyalty to the constitution, and promised that the army and navy would be found ready at any moment to support the provincial government, as well as the President chosen at the coming election. Much will depend on the attitude of the first Vice-President of Peru, Roberto E. Leguia, who is now on his way to Lima after being notified of the change in government. The Peruvian "junta" does not anticipate any difficulty in convincing Sr. Leguia that whatever the next step is it will be in the interest of the whole nation.

The fact that a number of the more important nations already have recognized the new order of things has proved a matter of considerable benefit in the working out of the governmental program now under way in this capital. The country as a whole has signified its intention to stand by anything that Lima may do toward establishing the government on a firm foundation.

PERU-BOLIVIA ALLIANCE SEEN AS POSSIBILITY

Visit of Former President Pando to Lima Forecasts a New South American Entente Between Neighboring Republics

CHILE IS ON GUARD

LA PAZ, Bolivia.—Gen. Jose M. Pando has returned to the capital after his momentous trip to Lima. The attentions shown the former Bolivian President in Peru are now being duplicated here, both by Peruvians residing in this city and those of General Pando's countrymen who realize the great importance of the statesman's journey to the neighboring republic.

The purpose of General Pando's visit was ostensibly to cement the existing friendship of the kindred people into something substantial and politically profitable. Since his return to Lima he has given several interesting accounts of his labors while in Lima. The newspapers of Lima, almost without exception, pointed out the significance of Peru and Bolivia drawing closer, and there are those who see in the present entente a move to forestall any action that Chile might take toward encroaching herself even more firmly than at present along the west coast of South America.

There is scarcely another Bolivian of the present generation who is able to represent the various political factions as disinterestedly as Dr. Pando. His administration is looked back to as one of the most successful in the history of the country. The troubles that he helped to minimize during the eventful years when Chile proclaimed its sovereignty of the sea were shared also by the Peruvian people. The neighbor has not forgotten the past and when General Pando became President in 1899 it was due to him that peace with honor was gained for the Bolivians.

General Pando was in Peru just before the revolution swept President Billinghurst from office. Although he was feted by the government, the change in administration will by no means affect the strengthened ties between the countries. If anything, the new regime is more decided in its leaning toward Bolivia than were the Billinghurst adherents, and if it is true that the Chilean and Peruvian relations have become strained lately there is one more reason why Peru and Bolivia will draw closer.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua.—Pressed for funds, the government found it necessary to increase the tariff duties 33 1-3 per cent. The extra revenue raised in this manner is to be applied to the payment of the domestic debt, according to the minister of finance.

HISTORY CONGRESS FOR BRAZIL

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil.—The President of Brazil, the vice-president and secretary of foreign relations have been named honorary presidents of the first national congress of history of Brazil, to be held in September.

When it was announced a short time ago that King Alfonso of Spain contemplated a visit to South America the press of the southern continent hailed the news with acclaim. In spite of the earlier differences between the mother country and the colonies, and the necessary struggles for independence in years following the ties between Spain and Argentina, for instance, have grown stronger and stronger. The presence of a scion of royalty among the Argentines would have shown conclusively that South American republicanism and European monarchical rule can get along well, provided each holds to its own governmental ideals.

It is now stated that King Alfonso is not to visit South America—at least not for the present. But on the heels of this announcement came the news that Prince Henry of Prussia was to go to Buenos Aires, and as this is being written the brother of the German Emperor is rapidly nearing the great city of Argentina, where preparations for his reception are making ready on a scale in keeping with the distinction of the visitor. As the prince is a great traveler and a connoisseur in sightseeing—as those who had the pleasure of meeting Prince Henry while he visited the United States some years ago are aware—it is only reasonable to believe that the Argentine government and the public at large will show him the best the nation possesses. Brazil and other southern countries likewise are to be visited by Prince Henry, who is accompanied by the princess. To South America the coming event is one that calls for gala entertainments.

North Americans as well as Europeans are becoming more frequent visitors in South America. The tour of Colonel Roosevelt, the visits of commercial organizations, the coming trip of Secretary of State Bryan, are but some of the instances showing that the United States is drawing closer to the neighbors below the Rio Grande. The party of university and college professors about to make a tour of the southern countries under the auspices of the Carnegie foundation for international peace should prove another tie the effect of which will be to solidify the interests of north and south.

International amenities pay for themselves. They are the precursors of that period when wars shall disappear. The arbitration treaties that Secretary Bryan announces are about to be signed with the A B C countries of South America—Argentina, Brazil, Chile—are no doubt the result of a better international understanding, and such an understanding springs from intercourse of the sort now becoming popular.

UNITED STATES BATTLESHIPS AS SEEN BY MEXICAN EDITOR

Newspaper Man Says of Big Craft, "They Disdain Our Smallness and Continue Immovable and Somber, Having Something Eternal in Their Expression"

MEXICO CITY.—Continuing in El Pais on the crest of one wave, to be lowered in the depression of the next. "We are so near the monsters that we can clearly distinguish the marines aboard them: blonde, white, vigorous, more than vigorous, athletic; they have traits of Apollo, and they look at us with their blue eyes in which we read the racial contempt with which they have always scorned us. For them we have been and continue to be 'greasers'."

"Afterwards we pass in front of the Carlos V., on whose deck we see nice-looking boys promenading, and we recollect the disaster of Cavite and Santiago de Cuba. We think bitterly that the same mission has reunited today conquerors and conquered, and the only consolation we have is the certainty that mother Spain weeps with us in our misfortunes, as we wept with her in hers."

"Further away, in the center, we see several ships; the mouths of the cannon which we see sticking out of the turrets, indicate that they are warships. To the south is the Carlos V., a Spanish cruiser; to the north the American cruiser the Des Moines, and between the two, the Chester, protected cruiser, and ensign ship of Admiral Fletcher.

"The cruiser Des Moines, splashed with big red spots, has a sad record for intervention, as she has been in Cuba, Panama and also Nicaragua, where she helped to pull down the legally constituted government of General Santos Zelaya.

"The stars and stripes wave victoriously in the wind; and above the decks the steel domes of the turrets appear to be crouching.

"The three gray boats surge from the sea, looking like medieval horses caparisoned with heavy harnesses. Monstrous they disdain our smallness, and continue, immovable and somber, having something eternal and definite in their powerful expression; strongly held by their anchors, while the nutshell that carries us bravely breasts the sea, rising

BUENOS AIRES PREPARING FOR VISIT OF HENRY OF PRUSSIA

City Hopes to Surprise Prince and Princess With General Cosmopolitan Nature of Its Population and Customs

SUBWAY ATTRACTION

BUENOS AIRES, A. R.—Unusual preparations are being made here for the reception of Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia, who are expected to arrive in Buenos Aires before the end of March. The German colony of the capital expects to take a conspicuous part in some of the entertainments to the royal couple, but on the whole the matter of showing hospitality will be left to the government, as it is felt that the coming visit has a certain international aspect which may redound to the benefit of both countries.

Although Prince Henry is quoted as saying that the trip about to be undertaken is one of pleasure solely, there are those who see further than this statement, and who believe that the enterprising hand of the Kaiser will be shown at some future day, and that with true German business instinct the brother of the German ruler will be awake to opportunities for extending the over-sea trade of the empire. Germany's influence in Argentina is already considerable. Some of the stanchest establishments in this city are in the hands of former natives of the Vaterland. In other parts of the republic the same enterprise is displayed by Germans, and they have done much to develop agriculture, as well as business in the cities. The people of Buenos Aires hope to MONUMENT TO CITY BY FRENCH surprise the royal visitors in showing them a community that can hold its own with the most cosmopolitan centers of either the old world or the new. The recent opening of the subway is one of the latest events to be mentioned in connection with Buenos Aires go-aheadness.

The success of the French in Argentina is also expected to interest Prince Henry, and he will have the opportunity of inspecting the monument that the United French societies of this republic presented to Argentina some time ago. Buenos Aires is a city of monuments and fine buildings, and it is continually adding to its architectural attractions.

PACIFIC TERMINAL SITE AT BALBOA COVERS 103 ACRES

Concrete Pier, Repair Wharf, Two Drydocks and Coaling Plant to Give Facilities to Ships

BALBOA, C. Z.—The site of the Pacific terminal at Balboa, including the dry docks, shop facilities, wharves, and the one new commercial pier authorized at present, begins with the sea end and extends about one mile in a southwest to northeast direction. It is bounded on the west and north by the approach channels from the canal, on the south by Sosa hills, and on the east by the yards of the Panama railroad. Its normal width is about 900 feet, and it will have an area of approximately 103 acres.

The site was originally a flat on the northwest side of Sosa hills, with a general elevation of only a few feet above sea level. Solid rock under the site dips at a steep inclination from the hills. The area occupied by the shops proper has been raised to a general elevation of about 17.5 feet above sea level by means of dry spoil; the area east of the shops proper was raised to a general elevation of about 16 feet by material pumped into it by pipeline suction dredges, working in the inner harbor. At the same time, the site was widened by excavation along the north face of Sosa hills.

The area devoted to the terminals was formerly occupied by a part native, part American village known as La Boca as well as by the shipways, wharves, and shops of the Pacific dredging department, the quartermaster's storehouse, and the storage yard for supplying materials to that department.

The accommodations for shipping at the terminals include a reinforced concrete pier, 1000 feet long by 300 feet wide for handling cargo; a repair wharf, having an aggregate length of 2960 feet, with average width of 50 feet; two dry docks, the larger 1000 feet long, 110 feet wide, and with a depth of 35 feet over the keel blocks at mean tide, the smaller 350 feet long, 71 feet wide, and with a depth of 13½ feet over the keel blocks at mean tide; and a coaling plant with facilities for handling and storing 210,000 tons of coal.

COZUMEL ISLAND INVESTIGATED BY YUCATAN BOARD

VERACRUZ, Mexico.—The agricultural board of Yucatan has compiled statistics relating to the island of Cozumel, which is in the Caribbean sea off the eastern coast of the peninsula of Yucatan, from which it is separated by a channel 10 miles in width, through which flows the gulf stream. The island is a part of the Mexican territory of Quintana Roo, and, with its 1300 inhabitants, is the most populous center of that federal division.

Cozumel is 270 miles from either Progreso, Mexico, or Belize, British Honduras, and is passed by fruit steamers from Mobile and New Orleans. The area of the island is 105,222 acres, most of which is covered with forests. Coconuts are grown for export, the largest plantation being owned by Mrs. Engracia F. Anduze de Perez, while Coldwell and Bonastre have a 4-year-old coconut plantation containing 25,500 trees.

PERU'S ATTITUDE IN DOUBT

CALLAO, Peru.—Some apprehension exists regarding the future attitude of the new government toward Chile. The deposed President, Guillermo Billinghurst, was decidedly pro-Chilean, but the same is not said about those now in control.

BRAZIL'S POLITICS AND ECONOMICS FACTORS IN CEARA REVOLT

Capital of South American republic where government is confronted with solution of problems concerning northern state

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil.—Slowly the news regarding the actual situation in the state of Ceara is reaching the capital. There has been an attempt to minimize conditions in that northern commonwealth, but all doubt as to a revolutionary activity has been dispelled, and it is admitted now that it would cause no surprise were the federal authorities to step in and assist the state government of Ceara in keeping order.

Here in Rio de Janeiro there are not many who understand what are the conditions, economically and politically, in Ceara. In this capital business, while considerably affected, runs along without any apparent show of slackening.

There is always much to occupy the people of Rio and considering that Ceara lies many hundred miles to the north it is not to be wondered at that so little of real information comes along. The state authorities at Ceara are not spreading broadcast the news that revolutionary movements are on foot there and in some respects it would only help to aggravate a situation fraught already with the potentiality of unpleasant consequences.

Historically considered, Ceara has had more than its share of difficulties to combat. Fortaleza, the capital, was raised to the rank of a city in 1823. The capital has about 60,000 population. The people of the state are hard working, and industrious, and since almost all the labor for the early development of the rubber industry of the Amazon region was drawn from there it is due largely to the savings of returned workers that the state became prosperous.

In 1884, five years before the declaration of the republic, Ceara took the lead in declaring against slavery within her borders. This was four years before the federal law was promulgated to that purpose. The effect of this progressive move, was felt immediately and when rubber gathering was at its height in the Amazon region Ceara profited greatly. With the recent depression in the trade there has come a corresponding dissatisfaction among the people. Interruption

Four Anti-Trust Bills May Be Combined Into One

President Wilson Confers With Legislators on Four Measures to Curb Trusts and Another Conference Is Planned

CONSOLIDATION IS SEEN

WASHINGTON—President Wilson at a conference last night with the House judiciary subcommittee on trusts approved the substance of the four bills to amend the anti-trust laws which the committee submitted in a virtually final form.

There will be another conference at the White House within a week and members of the committee expect all four bills to strengthen the Sherman law, covering interlocking directorates, holding companies, trade relations and definition of restraints of trade will be reported to the House within a fortnight.

President Wilson indicated his belief that it would be better to consolidate all the bills into one in order to expedite legislation. The Senate interstate commerce committee is understood to favor consolidation, and that it will be effected by the House judiciary committee is virtually certain.

The President made a number of proposals to the subcommittee. He insisted that personal guilt of individuals in control of corporations should be prescribed in every bill in order to break up the conditions that have grown up under the present antitrust laws. The committee will revise the bills with this in view.

Draft of Holding Bill

The draft of the holding companies bill had been completed just before the conference. The measure would make unlawful those holding companies which combine the stock of corporations so as to lessen competition, but would not affect companies which hold the stock of corporations that form essential parts of their business.

Holding companies which are entirely for investment and not for business directly are not prohibited. This would permit companies like the big insurance companies to hold the stock of corporations which are not competitors. The committee pointed out to the President that the bill would save to industrial business the investor who buys the stocks and bonds of various corporations but is not engaged in the business of operating any of them.

The bill applies to railroad holding corporations, but not to subsidiaries. It includes cotton mills if made up of combined competitors; it would prohibit holding corporations of moving picture concerns, which sought exemption, and would strike at various large holding establishments which made plans before the committee.

No Union Exemption

Theater corporations which hold two theaters in any one city, unless it could be proved that they were absolutely non-competing, would be prohibited, but the bill would not destroy a chain of theaters in different cities in which there was no element of competition.

None of the four bills so far framed provides for exemption of labor unions from antitrust prosecutions. Senator Hughes of New Jersey is expected to present an amendment for that purpose if the bills as they finally reach the Senate have no such exemption.

The trades relations bill prohibits manufacturers from contracting to prevent a merchant from handling a competitor's goods. It prohibits final price fixing to the consumer, though it permits the manufacturer or wholesaler to fix the price at which goods shall be sold in the first instance, as from manufacturer to jobber.

The interlocking directorates bill includes a provision to prohibit directors in various corporations selling to companies in which they are directors.

The definitions bill embodies such definitions as seem not to have been covered by decisions of the courts.

Goethals Honor Urged

Representative James Hay of Virginia, chairman of the House committee on military affairs, has introduced in the House a bill to reward Col. George W. Goethals with a major-generalship. It is understood that the bill has the endorsement of the war department.

Bill to Aid Stockholders

Senator Kenyon has introduced a bill for relief of "wronged and defrauded shareholders in corporations engaged in interstate commerce." It would empower minority stockholders to sue majority holders for recovery for losses in cases where fraud is shown in management, and would empower the attorney-general and interstate commerce commission to investigate the financial affairs of quasi-public corporations, with a view to determining whether the rights of minority stockholders were being protected.

Campaign Fund Inquiry

Chairman Woods of the Republican congressional campaign committee and Representative Pinchback, Progressive, were asked to appear before the House elections committee today and disclose what measures they are taking to fill their campaign treasuries. Their testimony bears upon the resolution of Republican Leader Mann charging that Chairman Doremus of the Democratic campaign committee is liable to prosecution for having asked congressmen to give $100 to the fund for use in the forthcoming congressional elections.

ATLANTIC FLEET NOW ON ITS WAY HOME FROM CUBA

Maneuvers at Guantanamo Over. Battleships Are Heading for Chesapeake Bay for Spotting Practice off Tangier Sound

NEW SHIPS JOIN SOON

WASHINGTON—Target practice and maneuvers of the Atlantic fleet came to an end Saturday at Guantanamo, on which day the ships sailed north. They are now en route for Chesapeake bay for spotting practice off Tangier sound, with the hulk of the San Marcos as a target, which will begin March 21 and continue until April 1. On the latter date the flag of the commander-in-chief will be transferred to the Arkansas, and the Wyoming will proceed to New York for overhauling. The other battleships will engage in experimental practice until April 8.

The Texas, which was placed in commission at Newport News, March 12, has gone to New York for magazine work. It will be ready for sea about the middle of April. The New York will be placed in commission at New York about April 1, and will be ready for sea about that time. After the New York and the Texas are ready for sea, about eight weeks will be consumed in "shaking down" runs and other preliminary work at sea, so that they will not be ready to join the Atlantic fleet much before July 1. They will be assigned to the first division, replacing the Michigan and the South Carolina, which will be transferred to the fourth division, taking the places of the Ohio and the Idaho, placed in reserve.

It is expected that the Nevada and the Oklahoma will be ready for service in about a year, when they will be assigned to the first division, replacing the Florida and the Utah, which will be transferred to another division.

The vessels of the Atlantic fleet now sailing north from Guantanamo are the Wyoming, Kansas, Nebraska, Delaware, Virginia, Louisiana, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Georgia, Michigan and South Carolina.

The Florida, Utah, Connecticut and Minnesota, now in the Gulf of Mexico, will be given an opportunity at target practice later in the spring, as will also the vessels now at the navy yards. The absence of ships in Mexican waters has interrupted to some degree the regular program of firing usually adopted for the Atlantic fleet at this season of the year.

Five army officers and certain officers of the naval militia will be present at the target practice as guests of the commander-in-chief of the fleet.

It is announced that as the result of the elementary practice recently completed by the torpedo flotilla in the West Indies, the Paulding now stands at the head of the list of these vessels with a score of 74.769.

BOSTON-SWEDEN DIRECT STEAMER LINE IS ASSURED

Fortnightly steamship service direct from Boston to Gothenburg, Sweden, is practically assured as a result of conferences held here recently. This service eventually may be increased so as to provide weekly sailings from each port.

Although the proposed steamship line is to be established by Swedish interests it is expected that Americans will have an interest also and that vessels registered under the United States will engage in the trade. Tentative arrangements have been made toward securing docking accommodations at Commonwealth pier, South Boston.

Plans call for the construction, probably by English shipbuilders, of four steamships each to be of 18,000 tons displacement. Orders for two of these vessels are to be placed next October.

CATTLE FEEDERS ARE TO MEET IN PENNSYLVANIA

STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—Cattle feeders of Pennsylvania are preparing to hold their first convention here on April 3. The agricultural experiment station connected with Pennsylvania State College has been conducting experiments in feeding cattle for a year. Sixty specimens were brought here from West Virginia. They were used for the experiments.

The herd will be judged and later sold. It has been divided into five groups and each one of these has been fed on different kinds of food.

The program will consist of addresses on stock feeding. These will include instructions and illustrations and will be given by cattle raisers, teachers and commission men.

COL. ROOSEVELT GIVES $2000 FOR MORE EXPLORING

Continuance of Work Begun in South American Forests Is Proposed to and Accepted by the Natural History Museum

SEES OPPORTUNITY

NEW YORK—Theodore Roosevelt will give financial aid to the American Museum of Natural History to continue explorations in South America by men of the museum staff. Two letters on the subject, from Colonel Roosevelt were made public Monday in which he offers to subscribe $2000 and assist in raising $4000 more to fully finance the work outlined.

A condition attached to Colonel Roosevelt's offer was that the museum should expend the money in completing the work of exploration he had begun. It was said at the museum that this would be agreed to, and Colonel Roosevelt's offer had been accepted. The letters containing the offer and other information about his trip were received by Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborn, president of the museum, and Frank M. Chapman, curator of ornithology.

Colonel Roosevelt said the region touched by his party was productive of wonderful results. One river was discovered, he wrote, and many mammals and birds obtained.

Regarding his offer to finance future explorations, Colonel Roosevelt, writing from San Luis de Caceres on Jan. 5 to President Osborn, said in part that he wished to help, with a subscription of $1000, send Mr. Miller to complete his work around Mt. Dulida, to ascend to the top and thoroughly to work the neighborhood from the standpoint of the mammalogist and ornithologist. He offered to subscribe a second amount of $1000 in order to send Mr. Cherry back for the museum, to work thoroughly the upper Paraguay marshes.

AUTO MEN START INCOME TAX TEST

WASHINGTON—John F. and Horace E. Dodge of Detroit, automobile manufacturers, Monday filed suits in the district supreme court here, attacking the constitutionality of the income tax law. They contend that the law unduly discriminates against individuals and partnerships in favor of corporations in the laying of surtaxes and in permitting corporations to withhold from taxation such portions of income as may be necessary for the needs and purposes of their business. The latter privilege is not allowed to individuals, the bill says.

OHIO SHOE MEN'S PLAN DISALLOWED

COLUMBUS, O.—The state industrial commission ruled Monday night that by demanding that their employees sign a permanent wage and "no strike" agreement before April 25 or lose their positions, three shoe manufacturing companies of Portsmouth, O., would violate the terms of a strike settlement and working agreement entered into by the companies and their employees, who recently returned to work after a strike. More than 2500 shoe workers are affected by the ruling.

RAILROAD MEN SEEK INCREASE

CHICAGO—Higher wages are sought by the firemen and engineers on 58 railroads west of Chicago, according to a statement on Monday at a conference of representatives of the men and railroads. Warren S. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, represents the men, and P. H. Morrissey, vice-president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, and officials of 12 other roads represent the railroads.

DESTROYERS' NAMES SELECTED
WASHINGTON—Secretary Daniels has chosen the names of Porter, Tucker, Conyngham, Wadsworth, Jacob Jones and Wainwright, prominent in the annals of American naval history, for the six new torpedo boat destroyers now building.

DREADNOUGHT IS TO BE COMPLETED IN ONE YEAR

NEW YORK—Designed to be the largest, swiftest battleship in the world, the new American dreadnought No. 39 was considered 20 per cent completed here Monday when her keel was laid in the Brooklyn navy yard. United States Senator O'Gorman, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, several congressmen and naval engineers were present. The new fighter, which is not yet named, will be of 34,000 tons displacement, 5000 tons more than the New York, now the largest United States battleship afloat. As the two giant strips of steel were swung into position in the exact center of the ways, five sons of attaches of the navy yard stood at attention. Commandant Albert Gleaves made a short address, in which he said that the battleship would be launched within 10 months.

STEEL COMPANY SEEKS MONEY OF THE GOVERNMENT

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Through Senator George T. Oliver, the McClintic-Marshall Construction Company has filed with the Senate appropriation committee a claim for $2,394,000 from the government. This company had the contract for making and installing the steel main lock gates in the Panama canal, involving 58,000 tons of steel. Inspection methods of the government are complained of by steel concerns which are filling contracts for work costing $16,000,000 on the canal. The McClintic-Marshall Company's original bid, on which the work was awarded to it in 1908, was $5,300,000. At intervals during the following five years the company's payroll on the isthmus bore the names of more than 5000 men. The contract involved 92 gate leaves, ranging from 64 to 90 feet in height, at the three series of locks on the canal. The erection involved the driving of 5,830,000 rivets in these gates.

UNEMPLOYED GO TO THE COUNTRY

NEW YORK—Eight women and 60 men of the unemployed left here Monday night in the care of C. W. Larson, deputy state commissioner of agriculture, to find work on farms near Fond du Lac, N. Y. They were the first of some 150 unemployed who have availed themselves of Governor Glynn's plan to bring together the jobless man in the city and the manless job in the country.

Only a few members of the contingent had been in the so-called army of the unemployed headed by the I. W. W. A second contingent of unemployed will be sent up state next Thursday.

WINNIPEG—That the Canadian government, when the annual budget speech is delivered this month in Ottawa, will announce a substantial reduction in duties on agricultural implements, was a report among dealers here. It was understood that on binders, reapers and mowers the duty will be lowered from 17½ to 10 per cent. The reduction, if satisfied, will go into effect April 1.

SETTLEMENT OF CONSERVATION PROBLEM NEAR

Secretary Garrison's Compromise Proposition Offers Middle Ground Between Extreme Federal and States' Rights Workers

BOTH SIDES PLEASED

WASHINGTON—Events of the past few days have seemed to indicate that the Wilson administration is to be successful in its efforts to solve the conservation problem, which for 10 years has been unsolved.

The Senate committee on commerce has finally designated a sub-committee to draft legislation in harmony with the water power recommendations of Secretary Garrison of the war department, covering navigable streams, and the committee, consisting of Simmons of North Carolina, Shields of Tennessee, Bankhead of Alabama, Democrats, and Nelson of Minnesota and Burton of Ohio, Republicans, is to begin work at once, with a view to reporting a bill at the earliest possible moment.

The South, which has much of the undeveloped water power of the country so far as navigable streams are concerned, has a majority of the sub-committee. The problem in that quarter, however, is unlike the problem in the intermountain states, beyond the Missouri river, where the power is in streams that for the most part are not navigable and that run through the public lands. The South and the West have had common ground in their demand that the water powers be all turned over to the states. At one time there was a possibility of uniting the South and the West on this states' rights question, and thus forming a combination which might have been able in the end to deprive the federal government of any authority over water powers.

Secretary Garrison's compromise proposition seems pleasing to all concerned. The question of how to dispose of the water power of public lands of the government is being worked out by Secretary Lane of the interior department, who is drafting a bill which will cover the administration program. It is believed that he will be as successful with this branch of the conservation question as Secretary Garrison has been with his, and that the Wilson administration is to have the credit for finally settling a question which has caused much controversy for many years, and which has been acute since conservation was made a federal policy during the Roosevelt administration.

The Garrison plan, which has been adopted by the administration and is to be worked out in the bill the Senate sub-committee will draft, takes middle ground between the extremists of the Pinchot type, who have wanted all power centered in, and all work done by, the federal government, and those other extremists, who have contended that the several states were the proper agencies for shaping and directing the work. Something is conceded to each side, but the objectionable features of both are eliminated.

WORKMEN'S BOARD CHAIRMAN NAMED

ALBANY, N. Y.—Governor Glynn Monday night nominated Robert E. Dowling of New York as chairman of the new workmen's compensation commission and John Mitchell of Mt. Vernon, Dr. Thomas Darlington of New York and J. Mayhew Wainwright of Rye as members. The fifth commissioner will be named later.

MANY PLANTS AND SEEDS IMPORTED BY UNITED STATES

Agricultural Department Officials Report Value Resulting From Adapting to Economic Uses Shrubs and Other Growths From Several Other Countries

WASHINGTON—Officials of the department of agriculture say that their department, since beginning the work of importing plants and seeds from various parts of the world with a view to their adaptation to economic uses in the United States, has accumulated what really amounts to a literature covering the various phases of that question. Hundreds of pamphlets have been published, embracing thousands of pages of printed matter, all devoted to telling about these imported plants and seeds, their history in their native soils, and what the result of transplanting has been.

It is to be said by way of justifying the work done that in a very great majority of cases the importations have been of value. In some cases this value has been very great, as for instance in that of the navel orange, now grown with so much profit in southern California. In other cases the value has been not so great, and in others still it has been comparatively small; but on the average, it is said that no work which the department is now doing has been more generally productive of good to the American people as a whole.

David Fairchild, agricultural explorer in charge of the bureau, calls attention to the magnitude of the work by saying that more than 30,000 plant importations have been made by the United States from the rest of the world. He says that in no other country, so far as known, has this work been carried forward on so large a scale. Nowhere else has there been kept an authentic record of importations.

Four times a year the government makes an inventory of its seed and plant importations, and from the latest one, the result of which has just been made public, some interesting data are obtainable, giving a general idea of the bulk of the work and its potential value. This last bulletin reports 802 imported plants. In the last quarter the following plants have been brought into the United States, among numerous others, with a view to their general introduction in those sections where they will grow to best advantage:

The Alger navel orange, from Algiers. A new sorghum from German East Africa.

A new perennial sweet pea from the mountain slopes of Bokhara. A wild spinach from central Asia, very resistant to hot weather.

A wild almond from the hot, dry mountain regions of Russian Turkestan, to be used as a drought-resistant stock, as a nut tree and as an ornamental tree.

A rapidly-growing ornamental and shade tree from St. Petersburg, promising for park and lumber purposes in the northwest states.

A grass from the sand dunes of northern Mongolia, having good sand-binding qualities and whose seeds make a good coarse bread.

A collection of grapes for table purposes from Syria.

Four species of Indian legumes of value for grazing purposes.

A valuable pasture grass from India. A collection of Indian corn from Bolivia, including the giant-kernelled and the sweet-kernelled varieties.

Two varieties of vegetables which may be adapted to Florida. A collection of ornamental trees and shrubs from India, suitable for the climate of southern Florida.

Two hay grasses from the Ganges valley of British India. A grass from India related to our sand bur, but having grazing value.

The best native hay grass in the Ganges valley, growing 2½ feet high. A new variety of Egyptian cotton.

A robust banana from Manila, which is attracting attention in the West Indies. A grass from Brazil, probably valuable for hay.

A red clover from Austria, which yields 25 to 30 per cent more than ordinary clover. A palm from Argentina, with fruit that looks like a crab apple and tastes like a green pineapple.

The akala fruit from Hawaii, more than an inch in diameter, with pleasant flavor. Five varieties of Chilean yams.

A species of large yellow-flowered senecio with flowers in bunches two feet long. A tree for hedges in arid regions, one of the most valuable trees cultivated on Chilean farms, and whose young foliage is much relished by sheep.

An evergreen tree from Chile, which whitens the forest with its blossoms. Nine varieties of the little known shrub called the arrayan, the fruit of which is said to be delicious.

The murta, considered the best wild fruit in Chile. A collection of seeds of ornamental trees and shrubs from Brazil and Argentina, some of which should be of great interest to southern park superintendents in the United States.

The chanar, a favorite fruit in Argentina. A remarkable bulb of the iris family from a dozen bulbs of which more than 1000 apricot-yellow blooms were produced.

A remarkable yellow fruited rubus, which climbs nearly to the tops of trees at Nice, and bears an abundance of good fruit. Four species of drought-resistant fodder grasses from New South Wales.

An elm from the transcasian territory, which is a more rapid grower and produces a harder and better wood than the American elm, and is one of the most beautiful avenue trees in the world. The broad-leaved conifer of Java.

A large yellow-flowered tree from Java, related to the magnolia. A perennial rice from Senegal, West Africa, which will grow in salt soils.

"THE POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL"

Hollis Street theater—"The Poor Little Rich Girl," play by Eleanor Gates. First time in Boston. The cast: Dancing Master.....W. Leonard Howe German Teacher.....Nellie Preston French Teacher.....Jeanne Jackson Music Teacher.....Helen Gurney Potter (the butler).....J. Palmer Gurney Royle (the governess).....Viola Fortesque Jane (the nurse).....Gladys Fairbanks Gwendolyn.....Viola Dana Thomas (first footman).....Harry Cowley Plumber.....William S. Lyons Organ Grinder.....Frank Currier Mother.....Ella Rock Father.....Harry Cowan Doctor.....Harry C. Browne First Society Woman.....Margaret Houck Second Society Woman.....Irene Rathbun Third Society Woman.....Belle Parks First Society Man.....Honore Connette Second Society Man.....James Bryson Second Footman.....James Robbins Broker.....Horace Mitchell Policeman.....Joseph A. Bingham Puffy Bear.....Al Grady King's English.....A. Alphonse

The author has handled an essentially pathetic story in such a fanciful manner that the entertainment is that blend of the serious and the comic most popular with playgoers. Another feature desirable in a popular stage play—it makes the audience feel imaginative and intelligent. It implies a wholesome moral in its argument for the children's right to the companionship of their parents.

Gwendolyn, the little rich girl, is poor in all the childish pleasures that money cannot buy. Her mother is socially ambitious, and her father is obsessed with his money making. Both wish to make a high place in society for their daughter. Gwendolyn's questions are not answered by her selfish and shallow tutors, governess and nurse. Altogether she is an unhappy, puzzled, lonely little girl, living in the memory of a summer out-of-doors with little Johnny Blake in the country, far from the limousine, where she could go barefoot, romp with the dog and have real friends.

As a result of her nurse's selfish actions Gwendolyn has a delirious dream the night her father and mother are entertaining a group of society friends. This dream is visualized in scenes depicting the Tiltale forest, the land where candles burn at both ends and at Robin Hood's barn. Alternately Gwendolyn has rising and sinking spells, shown in comic and pathetic situations on the stage, participated in by her father and mother, the doctor and all the personages of the household, whose dominant traits are visualized in costume, manner and speech. The act proved very amusing to the audience last night, and as amusement doubtless has its justification for author and playgoer.

As proving the theme it cannot be said to have much value, for little is to be learned of a study of human thought in its more unreal phases. The speech labeling hate as the worst poison of all is commendable, though some will feel it to be a slight antidote for the long first act filled with the abuse of a child. The theme was enforced less in this hour of Christmas-pantomime phantasmagoria than in the five minutes of the opening of the third act, showing Gwendolyn in bed, recovering from the dream, and her conscience-stricken parents by her side. This caused many persons in the audience to weep, showing that the true dramatic effect may be gained best through stage pictures representing actual human experience.

There is a final tableau, showing one of Gwendolyn's healthy dreams, following a moment when she has her dearest desire—a goodnight visit from her father and a lullaby sung by her mother. The stage darkens and lightens again to show them all having a romp in the country.

Miss Viola Dana was a sweet, lovable, wholly childish, but never insipid, Gwendolyn. The variety and imagination reflected in her acting was a delight. She seemed wholly the innocent child, unconscious even of the abbreviated dress the musical comedy producers require her to wear. This dress made one truly sorry for Gwendolyn.

The other roles call for performing, rather than acting, and each of the personages is to be praised for conscientiousness in roles that have little material of a grateful nature, however much they may contribute to the amusement of the audience. The settings are ingenious, spectacular; there is a constant succession of surprising episodes, most of them new to the stage, as a result of the author's repeated turning of her single idea of visualizing the "brothers" of ready-made conversation. There is abundant fancy and not a little poetry in her conceptions. Children and many of their elders will "love" this entertainment.

HERE AND THERE

Bernard Shaw's new comedy, "Pygmalion," will be produced for the first time in America in the Irving Place theater on Wednesday evening. The author has personally approved this German adaptation which has been successfully played in Berlin. The heroine, a London flower girl, is transformed by the hero, an English professor of elocution, into the semblance of a duchess. Miss Hansi Armstead, the Berlin star, is cast for the flower girl. Heinrich Marlow will play the part of Professor Higgins. Others in the cast are: Otto Stoekel, Grete Meyer and Heinrich Matthaeus. "Marrying Money," a farce by A. Washington Peet and Bertram Marburg, is announced for Wednesday evening at the Princess theater, New York. The story has to do with a group of smart society persons intent on bettering themselves financially through marriage. One such couple finds after the ceremony that neither has money, but they decide they are satisfied with love in a cottage.

"IOLANTHE"

An operetta that brings into conjunction fairies and the British House of Lords—the latter as conceived by Mr. Gilbert for his purpose—obviously calls for a type of music somewhat different from the other operettas of Sullivan. In "Iolanthe" the score shows us the Sullivan of German education, the composer of the glees and madrigals so popular in his country and his time. In a word, his aim apparently was for quiet beauty rather than stirring airs and rousing choruses, and that he reached the mark is shown in the effect of the score—rather that of a concert than of an operetta.

Beauty easily caught and hummed or whistled is not perhaps the most permanently haunting. And so "Iolanthe" had a host of friends renewing acquaintance with it at the Shubert Monday night.

The performance pleased but did not make the immense success of certain other pieces of this engagement. The score, not difficult technically, is exacting musically. Some false intonation and lack of balance between chorus and orchestra slightly marred a production that otherwise would have done credit to a concert performance by a long rehearsed chorus society.

Mr. Hopper's versatility has been shown often and his Chancellor did not contradict previous experience with his laugh getting ability. He uncovered a flash of pathos in the scene with the long mourned wife that was instant in effect. A delightful pair of lovers was seen—Miss Brady as Phyllis, though she would stray from pitch and Mr. Thomas as Strephon, one of the few men in comic opera who can sing. Miss Edwards, a good actress, did well with the Queen's justly famous song, as did Mr. Waterous in Private Willis' song. Miss Gladys Caldwell as Iolanthe, the name part not being the heroine in this case was good in song and action and Messrs. Aldridge and Cunningham were their wholesome, if not overmagnetic selves. The cast:

Lord Chancellor.....De Wolf Hopper Earl of Mt. Ararat.....Arthur Cunningham Earl of Toller.....Arthur Aldridge Strephon.....John C. Thomas Private Willis.....Herbert Waterous Train-bearer.....Henry Smith Fairy Queen.....Sara M. Edwards Iolanthe.....Gladys Caldwell Celia.....Gertrude Self Leila.....Florence Lee Fleeta.....Gladys McDonald Phyllis.....Alice Brady

"BURY FAIR"

Students, faculty members and others put their signature of appreciation to "Bury Fair" last evening in Brattle hall, Cambridge, when it was presented by the Harvard chapter of the Delta Upsilon fraternity. It is a revival of an Elizabethan play by Thomas Shadwell. With its scenes laid in the village of St. Edmundsbury, near London, about 250 years ago, the comedy savors of wigs and frilled satin costumes. Wit and waggery predominate. Had the play been clothed in modern fashion its essential elements would have applied with rare delicacy to many tendencies of the twentieth century.

Two young men seek the hand of Mr. Oldwit's daughter. Complications ensue. One of the men enlivens the situation by having a French barber masquerade as a "count." This would-be nobleman falls in love with the daughter of Mr. Oldwit's third wife, and with her empty pretensions to wit and good-breeding she reciprocates his affection in a marked degree. Wedding bells peal at the end, but not for the "count." His identity is revealed. Humility comes to the mother and daughter whose affection was their undoing.

There were nine settings specially painted by Gardner Hale '13. The costumes were designed by Mr. Hale. Carl Wetherell and J. S. Zinner played the two leading women's parts well. In bearing, speech and action Mr. Wetherell was a commanding figure. J. P. Gifford afforded much amusement in his impersonation of the French barber. Lionel Harvard and J. P. Brown gave fine renderings of English noblemen, and R. C. Fenn's exposition of "Mr. Oldwit," an old English squire, was admirable. The play will be performed again this evening in Brattle hall, and on Wednesday it will be produced in Jordan hall. On Thursday evening it will be given in Eliot hall, Jamaica Plain, and on Saturday the annual performance will be given at Wellesley College.

DAUGHTERS OF REVOLUTION HOLD THEIR ANNUAL MEETING

About 200 members of the Daughters of the Revolution attended the annual meeting held in Chipman hall, Tremont Temple today, at which officers were elected and reports read including that of the treasurer, Mrs. Elizabeth T. Holbrook, announcing the balance on hand to be $1500.89, and the expenditures for the year $2707.53. In addition to the balance on hand $43 has been raised toward a new piano for the state headquarters and there is a house fund of $235.48.

Mrs. Susan B. Plummer, who has held office five years in the society, three years as regent, presided and in her report said that she had visited 21 state chapters in the gifts which were received for the new state headquarters in the Hotel Westminster was given. These include rugs, a sofa, money, dishes, silver, and linen table covers. More than double the attendance of past years at the social meetings was reported, the largest number registered at one time being 50 persons.

Miss Mary A. Todd, registrar, announced that the increase in membership for the year was 35 members. Other reports were read by the vice-regent, recording secretary, corresponding secretary, historian and director of the Junior chapters of D. R. Some of the Junior chapters will include the history of the national flag in the program of their May meeting.

Officers elected were: Regent, Mrs. Ethel S. Bolton of Brookline; vice-regent, Mrs. Annie M. Nye Smith of Newton; recording secretary, Mrs. Caroline E. Woodbury of Allston; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Ella J. Prescott of Somerville; treasurer, Mrs. Elizabeth P. Holbrook of South Boston; registrar, Miss Mary A. Todd of Lynn; librarian, Mrs. Mae M. Buckley of Dorchester; historian, Miss Elsie K. Smith of Boston; councilors, Mrs. Julia M. Rowe of Allston, Mrs. Mary E. Fitch of Brookline, Mrs. Carolyn F. Cole of South Boston and Mrs. Sarah F. Sargent of Malden.

CASTLE SQUARE

John Craig's stock company is giving a good performance of "The Crisis," a drama of the civil war by Winston Churchill, this week at the Castle Square theater. The cast:

Stephen Brice.....William P. Carleton Elphaleet Hopper.....Donald Meek Clarence Colfax.....Frederic Ormonde Colonel Carvel.....Walter Walker Judge Whipple.....Al Roberts Carl Richter.....J. Morrill Morrison Jack Brinsmade.....Carney Christie George Catherwood.....Alfred Hunt Maurice Renault.....George Hunt Tom Catherwood.....Montana Williams Mr. Canter.....George Ernst Josephus.....Robert Capron Ephum.....George Ernst Auctioneer.....Montana Williams Virginia Carvel.....Miss Doris Olson Nancy.....Miss Augusta Gill Puss Russell.....Miss Florence Shirley Mrs. Brice.....Miss Mabel Colcord Maud Catherwood.....Miss Anna Fayston Eugene Renault.....Miss Beatrice Loring Anne Brinsmade.....Miss Sylvia Cushman

Ethically, this is perhaps the most commendable of all the war plays, since it shows how blended were the interests of the followers of the blue and the gray. Their hearts were at constant variance with their duty, and this was shown truthfully, not in mere conventional terms of the stage play. Thus Mr. Churchill's drama deserves high praise for its humanism and altruistic atmosphere. Though scenes are handled with little skill, the humanity back of it all provides a satisfying mingling of humor and pathos.

Mr. Carleton was well cast as the self-sacrificing heroic Brice, and Mr. Ormonde gave sincerity to Virginia's honest cousin. Miss Olson was wholly satisfactory as the proud southern beauty, who scorns the northern hero until the last five minutes of the play, then melts with pretty apologies. Mr. Meek in the one clearly defined character was an amusing scamp. The settings are handsome, and the quaint dresses of the ladies were pretty to see. The piece was well staged and care was taken in niceties of dialect.

OTHER BOSTON INTERESTS

An interesting film version of "David Copperfield" in seven reels, was put on Monday at Tremont Temple, where it will continue twice daily.

The production has been prepared with great care in all matters of detail and the principal characters are acted well. Many of the scenes are photographed in the parts of England where the story of Dickens' novel is laid and particular attention has been paid to the costuming, in accordance with the period of the book.

Especially realistic was the interior of the ark, the Peggotty homestead in Yarmouth, made out of a large upturned boat on the edge of the sea. The home of Mr. Micawber, Miss Trotwood and Mrs. Steerforth were all shown in individual fashion.

An interesting musical program was given between the reels by Mrs. Claire Dorva, a coloratura soprano. Mme. Claire's program included the waltz song from "Romeo and Juliet," the passing of Margherita, from Boito's "Mefistofele," and "Ah, fors'è lui" from Verdi's "La Traviata." She was encored.

Next week "The Trail of the Lone Pine" will be presented at the Boston Theater with Miss Charlotte Walker. "Soldier of Fortune" will be next week's attraction at the Castle Square theater.

Commander Evans will give an illustrated lecture at Symphony hall Thursday evening on Captain Scott's expedition to the south pole.

SUBMARINE WILL BE LAUNCHED AT FORE RIVER TODAY

QUINCY, Mass.—Another K-class submarine, the largest type now in service in the United States navy will be launched from the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation here late today. Mrs. Julie M. Child, wife of Lieut. Warren G. Child, assistant inspector of machinery at the Fore River works, stands sponsor as the K-5 slides down the ways.

The launching is a quiet affair, attended by a few naval officers and other officials. On March 26 the submarine K-6 is scheduled to be launched from the Fore River works.

MME. MELBA IN OPERA SCENES

Taking the part of the heroine in a presentation of the second and third acts of Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" and the role of Mimi in the last two acts of Puccini's "Bohème," Mme. Melba made her only appearance in opera in America this season at the Boston opera house Monday night before a large and pleased audience. The artists associated with the visiting soprano in the prominent characters of the Gounod scenes were Mr. Muratore as Romeo, Mr. Danges as Mercutio, Mr. Marvoux as the friar, Mr. Deru as Tybalt, Mme. Swartz as Stephano, Mme. Rienskaia as the nurse, Mr. Wronski as the duke and Mr. Grand as Capulet. The singers in the casual roles of Paris, Gregory and Benloio were Messrs. Everett, Sampieri and Fusco, respectively. The conductor of the French piece, as at the entire performance of it a fortnight ago, was Charles Strony. The impersonations of the Bohemian types surrounding Mme. Melba in her study of the sewing girl were Mme. Beriza as Musetta, Mr. Tanlongo as the poet, Mr. Danges as the painter, Mr. Marvoux as the man who sells his coat and Mr. Pulcini as the man who dances the fandango and brandishes the winning weapon in the shovel and tongs duel. The conductor of the Italian portion of the program was Mr. Moranzone.

Mme. Melba gave a beautiful performance of Juliette's music in the balcony scene. Her best effort of the evening by far was here. The authority of the star cast epoch of grand opera was in her reading of the heroine's lines in this dialogue. She sang as though conscious of her superiority over vocalists taught in modern studios. She knew her advantage from the standpoint of tone and style over the declaiming, realistic sopranos of the present fashion. Her smiling face was lighted with the joy of artistic command as well as with the joy of the heroine's high moment of romance. Mme. Melba's part of the duet and quartet of the chapel scene was only inferior to the balcony scene because of her less significant opportunity there.

Far less remarkable was the visitor's work in "Bohème," where there was conflict between conviction and method. In the Puccini role Mme. Melba endeavored on occasion to make herself a veritable opera singer. She made concessions to the new manner of lyric characterization but evidently had little heart in doing so. Indeed, she did not actually assume the voice of the declamatory sopranos; she merely broke into the course of her singing here and there with a spoken ejaculation. The singer's own school, with its emphasis on quality of tone, and the school she momentarily adopted, with its emphasis on style of delivery, were at odds. They did not go together and the fact that they did not was perhaps a proof that the modern singing pedagogy is justified in surrendering beauty of tone to voices may make dramatic situations more vivid and may delineate character more pointedly. The contrast of the old and the new school was heightened by the presence of Mme. Beriza in the cast. In the quartet of the winter scene the two sopranos illustrated the difference in effect between the operatic discipline which endeavors to make singing have the illusion of talking and that which makes singing an idealization of speech.

Mr. Muratore won a triumph in the scene of the street fighting, with which the "Romeo and Juliet" set, 7 pictures terminated. He made without doubt the greatest achievement of his Boston season portraying at the climax of this scene the man of the house of Montague in doubt between social conscience, which wedges his sword into its sheath, and the chivalric code, which tugs to bare it. Mme. Swartz excelled in her singing episode as the page of Romeo. Mr. Marvoux having, like her, but one scene to account for, gave his best to it. Mr. Danges brought an admirable tragedian's training to the first piece and as admirable a comedian's to the second.

The basic figure upon which the statue is molded is made from lead pipe and cross pieces of wood which keep the clay from dropping off. The plaster is often put on in sections for the sake of easy handling. Mr. Dallin pronounced bronze and marble the best materials for a permanent form, as plaster absorbs too much light. Modern sculptors do little of the real marble cutting, continued Mr. Dallin. It is done by men who make a business of copying models, but usually the finishing touches are put in by the artist after the statue is handed over from the marble cutter as finished. Mr. Dallin ended his talk with a description of the two methods of bronze casting now in use. The most common and inexpensive one, he said, was that in which French

BOARD TRIES TO SETTLE STRIKE

LAWRENCE, Mass.—The industrial committee of the Lawrence Chamber of Commerce called a meeting today to try to get a settlement of the Pacific mill strike. Agent Parker of the mills refuses to negotiate with employees away from their work, but will meet them on their grievances when they shall have returned to work. It is said about 2000 are idle owing to a strike by 250 color mixers.

An investigation of strikes at the Pacific mills and the Beaver Brook mill of the American Woolen Company of Lowell has been commenced by the state board of conciliation and arbitration, with a view to bringing about an early adjustment.

NEW DALLIN STATUE WILL SHOW THE INDIAN SCOUT

A recent study of Indian life made by Cyrus E. Dallin, who spoke at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts Sunday afternoon on "The Making of a Statue," is the plaster model of "The Scout," which, when completed in the bronze, will probably be placed in front of the new Union station now in process of construction in Kansas City.

The statue shows a mounted Indian scanning the horizon in a hostile count-

try. Many of Mr. Dallin's Indian models have been personal friends of the sculptor since his boyhood when, as "Mr. Tom's papoose," he was their pet and playfellow around the log cabin on the western frontier.

Mr. Dallin said the Indian of pioneer days was often esthetically the superior of the average white man and that it was from his Indian friends that he received his first idea of art. The Indians, said Mr. Dallin, had definite artistic ideas and the saying so often heard "the noble red man" never came from mere chance. When fairly treated Indians are kindly and hospitable and they have a remarkable instinct for friendship.

Again in "The Scout" the real Indian horse appears with its slim ankles and thin nostrils, its pose one of suddenly arrested activity which at the smallest sign or motion is ready to continue in a swift race across the plain.

In an introductory outline of sculpture, Mr. Dallin said it was the first means of recording the history of the races, and carving in stone and ivory was the earliest known art.

The sculptor, said Mr. Dallin, must be a craftsman as well as an artist. The statues of today are made in the same manner as the statues of the ancient Greeks and there is scarcely any change in the tools. The sculptor begins with his sketch, from which he makes a clay figure a few inches in height. Then comes the larger model with the details and design completed and last of all the working model which is usually one third the size of the final production and contains every detail.

The basic figure upon which the statue is molded is made from lead pipe and cross pieces of wood which keep the clay from dropping off.

The plaster is often put on in sections for the sake of easy handling. Mr. Dallin pronounced bronze and marble the best materials for a permanent form, as plaster absorbs too much light. Modern sculptors do little of the real marble cutting, continued Mr. Dallin. It is done by men who make a business of copying models, but usually the finishing touches are put in by the artist after the statue is handed over from the marble cutter as finished. Mr. Dallin ended his talk with a description of the two methods of bronze casting now in use. The most common and inexpensive one, he said, was that in which French

EXHIBIT OF CHINESE POTTERY

A special exhibition of Chinese and Korean pottery is to be held in the gallery of the Japanese garden at the Museum of Fine Arts from March 18 to April 8. This exhibition is noteworthy as containing in addition to a selection from the museum's rich collection selections from the private collections of Thomas Allen, Mrs. Samuel Cabot, Desmond Fitzgerald, J. P. Lyman, Dr. D. W. Ross and Miss Margaret Thomas. The exhibition illustrates the beauty of Chinese pottery from about the second century, B. C. down to the nineteenth century, but it is especially rich in specimens of Han, Tang and Sung dynasties. Many of these specimens are unique in their beauty and richness. These are chiefly early domestic ware, of which perhaps the most interesting examples are two small bowls, which are probably the earliest known pieces of porcelain. There are a number of pieces which were brought to this country by Captain Brinkley, who, with Dr. Bushell, was chiefly instrumental some 20 years ago in spreading the knowledge and interest in Chinese pottery and porcelain. The pieces which were obtained by Thomas Allen from Captain Brinkley show the kind of Chinese ware that the Japanese have for centuries enjoyed and collected.

SPECIAL MUSEUM EXHIBIT

In view of the fact that M. Guiffrey's leave of absence from the Louvre will end April 1, the Museum of Fine Arts is to hold in the Renaissance court an exhibition of all the pictures purchased by M. Guiffrey during the three years that he has been curator of paintings at the museum, and also of most of the gifts which have been accepted by the museum during this period. The museum desires in this way to give its friends an opportunity to realize how much the museum is indebted to M. Guiffrey for his services.

The exhibition will open to the public Thursday morning, March 19.

FRENCH IMPRESSIONIST PAINTINGS

Other landscapes by Monet, Sisley and Pissarro continue on view, the whole making a handsome display in the characteristic fine vein of these noted artists.

BOSTON GALLERY NOTES

CONTRIBUTORY SYSTEM FOR STATE PENSIONS IS ADVISED

Commission Sends Report to Legislature Urging Repeal of Present Schemes and Adoption of Uniform Plan Under Direction of a Retirement Commission

Revision of all the public pension systems in the state is recommended in the report of the pension commission now in the hands of the Massachusetts legislators, to whom it was transmitted yesterday afternoon.

The report carries with it a bill proposing a plan of contributory legislation. It would repeal all the existing pension laws in the state, with the exception of that for the supreme court justices, and establish a compulsory contributory system whereby all state, county and city employees must contribute 5 per cent of their salaries toward a pension fund. To carry out this scheme satisfactorily, it would appoint a retirement commission, with a deputy and a clerical force.

The commission, which consists of James E. McConnell, chairman; Magnus W. Alexander and Henry Dennison, points out that there are now more than 100 different pension systems in the state and that on August 31, 1913, the total of $721,000 was being paid out to about 15,000 pensioners.

Furthermore in every case where on actuarial tables it attempted to project ahead the possible cost to which these various systems were bound to grow, the commission found that the new tables were astounding.

The bill would be mandatory upon employees of the commonwealth, the metropolitan district, counties and cities and towns of more than 10,000 population at the last census, and to towns of less than 10,000, so far as school teachers are concerned. Towns which might hereafter have a population of over 10,000 might accept the act by vote.

The bill provides a pension or annuity of about one half of the average salary or wage, but does not recognize any salary in excess of $2000.

It provides for an assessment of 5 per cent of the salaries or wages of the employees for a period of not more than 25 years.

It provides that the public employer shall appropriate such sums from year to year after the tenth year of the employment as will equal, with regular interest, at the end of 25 years, the amount which the employee has contributed in the 25 years of service. In addition, the entire expense of administering the system is to be borne by the employer.

Veterans of the civil war and justices of the supreme judicial court are alone exempted. All others, justices of the superior court, court officers, probation officers, department heads, executive clerks, minor clerks, laborers, policemen, firemen, all except elective officers and officials appointed for a definite length of time, are brought within this contributory plan and limited to the $1000 maximum.

The bill proposes the repeal of the compulsory feature of the Boston teachers' act, so that those teachers may not be obliged to contribute hereafter to two retirement funds. The state teachers' re-irement fund would be eliminated and its moneys turned over to the new fund. The Boston system of paying its teachers pensions by appropriating 5 cents on each $1000 of assessed valuation of taxable property is called wrong, and the report says the city should appropriate 25 cents on the $1000. It says that the Boston teachers' resources for pension fund are insufficient and that a deficiency now exists of about $1,000,000.

"This means," says the report, "that in addition to its present resources consisting of the annual contributions of $18 from the present teaching force, and the fund now on hand, it would require about $1,000,000 to meet the pensions of teachers now retired and the future members of the present active force, without any account being taken of future employees. It would be very difficult to put this fund upon a sound basis within a short time, but some improvements could be effected by—

"Increasing the annual contributions.

"Reducing the amount of pensions paid.

"Revoking the privilege to teachers who were in service prior to the establishment of the plan, of purchasing the pension by payment of $540 in a lump sum, and requiring them to pay the full value of such annuity, or about $1700."

The commission concludes by stating that the report is submitted with a unanimous recommendation of its members, and is made with a view to unifying administration, avoiding concealed taxation and establishing equality among all public servants.

HARVARD HEAD NOTES BUSINESS SCHOOL RESULTS

President Lowell Says in Annual Report That Cost Accounting
System Wins Recognition

Some of the methods for cost accounting devised by the business school have been adopted by many industrial concerns, and the institution is fast winning recognition, according to A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard University, in his annual report just submitted to the corporation. He declares, however, that to place it upon a perfectly sure foundation further permanent endowment is needed.

The president makes a strong plea for the full four-year course in college. He says, in part:

"The causes for the diminution of three-year men are probably to be sought, in part at least, in the stiffening of easy courses and in a greater appreciation of the value of the fourth year—a value due not chiefly to the fact that it is the last, but rather to the fact that it is the fourth. Graduation in three years is sometimes taken to indicate unusual ability or industry, but, while it cannot be achieved by the really dull or indolent, it does not imply particularly good scholarship.

"Some men stay only three years in college and hasten to get at work in the world, although they feel no financial pressure; and, considering the present entrance, this is not without justification. Children in the United States are sent to school late, make slow progress, especially in the primary stage, and in consequence come to our colleges later than they ought to come."

DULL, NARROW MOVEMENT IN STOCK MARKET

Traders Still Waiting for New Impulse to Buy or Sell—Missouri, Kansas & Texas Preferred a Weak Feature

BOSTON & MAINE UP

Business on the stock exchanges has flattened out considerably. Traders are waiting for the much-expected incentive and the professional does not care whether the new impulse is a bear or bull influence so long as he is prepared to operate on either side of the account.

Trading this morning was extremely quiet, and for the most part price movements were narrow. Missouri, Kansas & Texas preferred again was a weak feature, selling off abruptly in the early part of the session. The Rumely issues were higher.

Boston & Maine moved up well on the local exchange. New Haven was weak. Missouri, Kansas & Texas preferred opened off 1/4 at 45 1/2 and declined to 42 1/2, rallying moderately before midday.

Studebaker common and preferred both advanced well. Virginia Carolina Chemical opened up 1/4 at 32 1/2 and sold above 33. American Sugar, Missouri Pacific, American Can and Amalgamated Copper had good gains.

New Haven recovered from its early weakness. After opening off 1/4 at 87 1/2, it advanced to 89 1/2 on the local exchange before midday. Boston & Maine change before midday. Boston & Maine held around 39, a gain of 2 points from last night's closing. Granby moved up a point to 89. American Telephone was fractionally higher.

The New York market continued to gain strength and breadth in the early afternoon. Prominent in the advance were Baldwin Locomotive, American Cotton Oil, American Can and Central Leather.

Business on Exchange Reflects Lack of Confidence and Prices Are Irregular—Canadian Pacific Shows Heavy Tone

AMERICANS ARE QUIET

LONDON.—Markets idle; no important changes.

(By Boston Financial News)

LONDON.—Price movements were irregular today and a lack of confidence was apparent.

Domestic issues flattened in the forenoon on Asquith's overnight speech which obscures the prospects of an Ulster compromise, but recovered from the lowest.

After touching 74 15-16 consols rallied to 75 3-16.

Home rails showed discouraging aspects and Americans ranged narrowly on professional dealings. Heaviness was disclosed by Canadian Pacific.

Mexican Railway, Ltd., descriptions failed to respond to the good earnings. Interbourse issues became firm on the reported resignation of Finance Minister Caillaux.

Telegraphic communication with Paris was still faulty. Other departments ruled slow. De Beers off 1-16 at 18 1/4. Rio Tinto shaded 1/4 to 99.

SHOE TRADE SITUATION SEEMS SOMEWHAT BRIGHTER

Little Change in Volume of Business Is Noted, but Demand Is Well Scattered Among the Various Lines—Prices Still Firmly Held

The main features have changed but little since the last market reports from shoe manufacturers were obtained. However, though it requires a large volume of new business to give to a market of this size a noticeable activity, inquiry brought to light the fact that a fairly good number of orders have been received. While they were moderate in volume, the area of the country heard from was extensive and the demand well scattered among the different lines of samples. So the situation seems somewhat brighter.

Memory fails to recall conditions similar to those now prevalent in the shoe trade. Many times the business has been sluggish, even during seasons when it should have been at its best; then it was revived by energetic efforts, coupled with concessions, but today manufacturers are holding prices, terms and shipping dates with a significant firmness, even though there are many in need of orders to keep organizations intact and thereby prevent overhead charges from becoming serious burdens.

As a matter of fact a large manufacturer stated that contracts for liberal amounts, stipulating late summer shipment, have been declined though his factory production is well below capacity.

The cause of this independent attitude is attributed to the strong condition of the leather market which is accounted to the high price of hides, moderate supply and the conservative manner in which tanners have regulated the output. Large stocks of leather are conspicuously absent, much of the warehouse floor space being bare, and certain grades of leather being produced in a manner commensurate with the demand, tanners presuming little and knowing less. Strength of leather values still features that market and the price and supply of hides the past week give to the future added stability.

At present the shoe trade is not such as to create an incentive on the part of the buyer to liberal operation, regardless of however strong prices may be, or leather values hold.

Conditions among the packers continue firm, and it is evident that they have control of the situation, as hides brought about the same range of prices as last reported. Sales fell off some, though the light demand did not affect the market appreciably. Tanners are buying cautiously, preferring to go often and pay the price, than take risks with a market already a record breaker in many respects.

Though the poorest in quality, hides are being pulled off this month; March heavy Texas steers sold at 18½ against 17½ a year ago, and February branded cows brought 18½, this time last year 16½.

The whole market is strong, warehouse stocks small, and the output limited, with an increasing demand gradually manifested. Therefore, as the prices have been maintained through the grubby season, there is no need to look for lower figures on the verge of better quality hides and an improving, shoe trade.

The future indications are not promising to those looking for cheaper leather. Dealers are too near the activity which follows spring months to concede anything, if they could, and what favors their prospects is equally helpful to hide dealers. Moreover, the natural improvement of hides redounds to the credit of the packers. Therefore with a usual amount of business during the next six months prices of shoe material ought to be maintained by an ordinary activity and jump to higher records if the demand becomes in excess of expectations, which are inclined to moderation.

Hemlock sole leather dealers report business improving. Stocks are small and prices firm. Domestic buyers are looking with more interest and operating freely but not extremely so. The foreign department has been particularly active since Jan. 1. Orders for large and moderate amounts have brought the total booked for abroad shipment up to 250,000 skins and over, and every order sold at top prices.

Dealers in union sole leather had a very satisfactory week. Sales were not individually large, but there was a steadiness that gave to the business a better appearance. There were many buyers in the market and scarcity of stock with extreme firmness of prices prevented liberal transactions.

Oak sole leather is active, bends, backs and sides being well sold up, the receipts hardly sufficient to keep pace with the trade. In fact the week was a good one for the sole leather folks.

A sharp inquiry was reported by the oak skin dealers, and it was said that if prices had dropped a little a good trade would have resulted. There was bidding for all weights and colors, but dealers held prices firmly so the offers failed to materialize into actual business.

Chrome side leather was quite prominent in the dealing, with elk leather playing second part on account of the difference in price. Kangaroo and satin also figured well in the week's business for the same reason. If black split could be produced in quantities commensurate with the demand it too would be prominent in the sales account.

Patent calf is just as scarce as before reported, and it looks as though there is to be no relief as the call is increasing. Of course this greatly affects patent side leather, particularly light weight stock. There is also a patent goat skin which is moving well at 13c, but the tender nature of the jannping forbids its use for vamps, and tips, but it is being cut into quarters largely.

Glazed kid is steadily growing in favor. Perhaps the scarcity and high prices of other grades may make the call for it rather obligatory than one of popular favor. The lower grades are well sold up, and the demand for the better skins is plainly on the increase.

Men's fine and medium fine shoes are being rushed through the factories to meet the Easter demands. The finer the shoe the better the business seems to have featured the market during the winter run.

Manufacturers of ladies' footwear are having a good trade for certain shoes, combinations selling better than all of one kind. The call for fabric quarters in boots and colonials has been large enough to clean the market of that material and much delay is caused thereby.

Children's shoes have had a quiet spell of late, most of the factories running on orders for future shipment. This is hardly unexpected, as the factories have been very busy for a long time back. Manufacturers state that they are making no special effort to enliven matters, for they claim the business will come later.

ESTIMATES OF WHEAT CROP

CHICAGO—Estimating the wheat crop of the United States at 763,000,000 bushels and allowing 90,000,000 bushels for supplies in all positions on July 1, 1913, the Daily Trade Bulletin figures that aggregate supplies for the 12 months would be approximately 835,000,000 bushels.

Allowing 525,000,000 bushels for consumption, about 80,000,000 bushels for seedling during the harvest year and 112,000,000 bushels exported to date, accounts for 717,000,000 bushels—and there would remain for export during the current four months and for supplies on hand July 1, 1914, about 136,000,000. The exports from March 1 to July 1, 1913, were about 35,000,000 bushels.

Transactions since Jan. 1 to March 14 totaled 21,250 shares, the record trading for any 12 months since 1902.

The company has paid 11½ per cent in dividends since 1854, when organized as an association under the laws of New York.

EARLY PLAN FOR SHAREHOLDERS OF NORTH AMERICAN

NEW YORK—North American Company reports for year ended Dec. 31: 1913. 1912. Total rec. $2,369,742 $2,344,470. Rent, taxes, etc. 282,180 213,243. Undiv. profit 2,087,562 2,131,227. Dividends 1,489,065 1,489,065. Surplus 597,897 641,562.

*Equal to 6.97% on $29,793,000 stock outstanding, compared with 7.15% previous year.

Strength in North American Company's $29,793,000 stock is based on the probability of an early plan. It is understood that the management plans to issue $3,000,000 5 per cent notes of the Wisconsin Edison Company. These will be offered to North American shareholders in the ratio of 1 to 10 and with a bonus of 100 per cent in Wisconsin Edison stock, now paying 3½ per cent in dividends and earning about double that amount. These new notes with the stock bonus will be offered to North American stockholders at about $1300 for each $1000 note. They are expected to command a market of around 95 to 100, which means the purchase of Wisconsin Edison stock at $30 to $35 per share, or an income basis of 10 per cent.

The proceeds of these $3,000,000 notes will go into the North American treasury, cancelling loans which the parent company has made to its subsidiary in the last few years for construction purposes.

There is also a very good prospect that the North American dividend will be put on a regular 6 per cent basis against 5 per cent which has been the regular rate since April, 1909.

The company earned between 8 per cent and 9 per cent for its stock in 1913 against 7 per cent in 1912 and is in a position where it could comfortably afford to make a somewhat larger return to its stockholders.

Rumors of purchase of the company by General Electric are acuted by those in closest touch with the property. President Coffin of General Electric has been a North American director for several years, but the relationship begins and ends there and there is no disposition on the part of either company to alter the existing status.

BUSINESS IS WAITING FOR ENCOURAGING DEVELOPMENTS

No Indications of Enduring Revival But Hope Is Entertained That Conditions Will Improve Latter Part of the Year—Review of Situation

In its monthly review of financial and industrial conditions in New England the First National Bank of Boston says:

Two and a half months of 1914 have passed, and thus far no enduring revival in business activity has occurred. In January, and up to the middle of February, reports of better conditions in the steel industry held out hope of an upward trend in general business. In the last half of February, however, this temporary gain in the steel business flattened out. In a similar way, in cotton manufacturing the tendency, noticeable a few weeks ago, toward large orders and better prices vanished, and conditions in that line show no signs at the moment of improving. The makers of fine goods, however, who have been making the poorest showing, are inclined to be a little more optimistic owing to the demand for sheer materials which has appeared.

An examination of decreasing net and gross railroad earnings throws a strong side light on the inert condition of trade. More and more the public mind is becoming focused on the proposed increase in freight rates now under consideration by the interstate commerce commission. If a recovery from business depression is unlikely until this increase has been granted, as many people think, there is little probability of relief from this direction until the end of the summer.

By this time crop news, also, will be sufficiently definite to act upon. Favorable results in respect to these two vital factors would do much to improve business the last half of the year, and thereby partially make up for substantial business during the first six months of 1914.

Within a few days, the officials of the New Haven railroad have stated that any tentative agreement, which may be reached with the attorney-general, will be effective only upon ratification by its stockholders. This statement, following closely the announcement by the officers of the Pennsylvania railroad that it is unwilling to relinquish its ownership in Norfolk and Western until the legality of the question has been passed upon by the supreme court, has made a favorable impression. Many thoughtful people have looked askance at the disposition of corporation officials to bind their companies, without stockholders' approval, by agreements involving vital matters, including the giving up of property.

On Jan. 31, 1914, the most recent date for which figures are available, the combined unfilled orders of the "big three" manufacturers of electrical supplies aggregated $42,121,000. This is the lowest figure reached in many months. The peak in the volume of unfilled orders for the last year was reached in September, 1913, when $54,585,000 in unfilled orders was rolled up. Since September—four months—the decline has been very sharp, amounting on Jan. 31, 1914, to 22.9 per cent. The decrease in January, 1914, over December, 1913, however, was the smallest of any month since the decline began—so small, in fact, as to amount practically to a turn for the better.

The significance of these figures, however, may be easily understood. The volume of unfilled orders is sometimes a treacherous barometer of conditions. In a period of activity, unfilled orders might suddenly dwindle through the additions of a new plant, or other increase in the producing capacity. Then again, unfilled orders might pile up in a dull period, due perhaps to a strike. Consequently, unfilled orders for electrical supplies are primarily valuable for denoting the "fat" on which the companies can subsist, especially during depressions. As the "big three" do a combined gross business of approximately $200,000,000 per annum, their unfilled orders combined on Jan. 31, 1914, were sufficient to keep the combined plants going, at this rate of capacity, for two months and a half, even though no more new business whatever should be meantime received.

Orders received, however, are vital, and rarely made public. Unfilled orders are frequently quoted publicly, notably in the case of the United States Steel Corporation, but orders received usually form the basis of discussion of conditions.

As indicated by the chart, combined orders received by two of the "big three" manufacturers of electrical supplies were the smallest in January, 1914, of any month since February, 1912. Not before, since July, 1912, did orders received go below $13,000,000 in volume in any one month. The year 1913 as a whole was a good one, however, due mainly to the results scored in the first half, and it is possible that the 1914 order may be so reversed that a very weak beginning may be turned into a good finish.

On the eve of the spring season, trade is normally on a slack basis. Picking out at random trades from the secondary lines in New England, one finds this seasonable influence in full effect.

The dealers in gas, gasoline engines and scales find things slow in some departments, while in others they are holding their own. On the whole, business is about as it was in December. The outlook, however, is much better. After April 1 business is expected to pick up.

The gas pipe and steam pipe makers are normally quiet at this time, but there are evidences that they are unusually so. They expect to begin to work out of the dullness after April 1. The rubber goods trade is one of the beneficiaries of the severe recent weather.

Dealers' stocks are low and goods are needed. Last year the dealers carried over a large stock because of the open weather then prevailing. On the whole the outlook is good.

The printers have been having generally a hard time of it. Those covered up by contracts have been secure, but new business has been at a painfully low ebb.

The makers of blocks, pumps, pulleys, tackle, etc., are practically standing still. Part of this dullness is normal. Some of the local dealers possess a large market covering a wide area, but everywhere the travelers meet the same dull condition.

The telephone business is an exception to general business and is constantly growing in good times and bad. Even with general business considerably below normal, the telephone business, as shown by the gross earnings of the companies, continues above normal. The telephone business is not, therefore, a good index of general business, despite the extensiveness of the use of the telephone. The line for general business made up of a composite of several indices shows the extent of the depression down to the end of January as compared with normal business. The course of general business as pictured by the chart is seen to have been plainly downward for an entire year, except when interrupted by seasonal rallies coming in the spring and fall. The telephone business apparently does not fluctuate as widely as general business, and does not yield correspondingly in times of depression.

The keen demand for bonds which has been so much in evidence the past two months has subsided since the first of March, and the market is now in about the condition it has been for the past year, which means that it is approaching almost dullness. However, the undertone is strong, especially for municipal issues, and prices have receded but very little, although the activity is past. The sensational demand in January and February came unexpectedly, and it is not natural that there should be a considerable reaction, for this demand was greatly accentuated over the usual January investment by the great accumulation of uninvested funds of the previous few months.

There is much long time financing still to be accomplished, and we do not look for rising prices in bonds, though there should be a fair absorptive demand for new issues, as money bids fair to continue fairly easy for some little time.

On call money in the Boston market is on a 3 per cent basis, with a very light demand. During the past month, the sales of commercial paper have been much restricted in volume, ruling rates being from 4½ to 4¾ per cent. The tendency in time rates is upward, banks being fairly well loaned up and borrowings, as usual at this time of year, somewhat heavier, especially by concerns producing goods for fall delivery.

CONTESTANTS ENJOY DAY OFF IN TENNIS MATCH

Playing of Amateur Champion Monday Stamps Him as Greatest Non-Professional the Game Has Ever Developed

TO PLAY TOMORROW

PHILADELPHIA—Jay Gould, world's amateur champion, and G. F. Covey, world's professional title holder, who met Monday in the first of their series of matches for the world's open championship at court tennis on the courts of the Philadelphia Tennis and Racquet Club, are today taking it easy in preparation for the second part of their match, which comes tomorrow.

Gould overwhelmingly defeated Covey in the opening day's play Monday, capturing all four of the sets played and all that he now needs to win the title are three more sets. As tomorrow's play will consist of four sets, there is a good chance of his ending the match without the necessity of playing Saturday.

That Gould is the greatest amateur court tennis player yet developed in the opinion of those who saw him, in his Monday's contest. Not even in the days when he first won the American title and later when he defeated E. H. Mills for the world's championship, has he given such a brilliant exhibition of tennis as he gave against Covey. He was here, there and everywhere and he seemed to have no difficulty at all in handling any of his opponents' shots.

It is generally felt that Covey was slightly off form in the early sets when he won but one game out of the 12 played in the first two, but granting this there was little chance of his having been able to change the final result had he played at his very best. Gould was so fast and so accurate that it was practically impossible to break into the American's defense and his scoring shots were such that even so great a player as Covey at his best would find most difficult to overcome.

Mr. Gould lost only two hard chances during the entire match and served at least 10 which Covey was forced to let go without a try. Mr. Gould played every ball well. He did more than simply attempt to return the most difficult shots, whereas Covey more often than not was satisfied to get the ball back.

The first 11 games were won in succession by Gould. The third set was the closest of the four, Covey making as high as four games. It was one game all, two games all, and finally four games all. In the eighth game there was a rally.

Covey tried the underhand service in the fourth set. This bothered his opponent for one game only, and Gould won at 6-3. The score:

FIRST SET		Pts G
Gould	4 5 4 5 5	21-6
Covey	2 6 3 1 3	18-0

TAFT REFUSES $750,000 FOR THE CHICAGO CLUB

CINCINNATI, O.—Charles P. Taft, majority stockholder of the Chicago National League Baseball Club, refused an offer of $750,000 in cash for the club Monday, made by John T. Connerly and Frank D. Mayer, representing a syndicate of Chicago capitalists who desired to purchase. The price that Mr. Taft has asked for the club was not announced.

Mr. Mayer, in speaking of the offer, said: "We have reached our limit and any further overtures must come from Mr. Taft. The outlay in purchasing the club would be approximately $1,250,000, inasmuch as the new grandstand is a necessity. I doubt whether the club would be a paying investment on half that sum if the grandstand was not erected. I do not mean by this, however, that we have given up hope of obtaining the club."

ATHLETICS MEET CHICAGO TODAY

RED SOX PLAY ARKANSAS TODAY

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—This is to be a gala day for the Boston Americans, as they are scheduled to play a game with the University of Arkansas in the presence of the Governor and mayor, as well as many visitors.

Manager Carrigan is fast getting his men into championship form, and with the exception of Captain Wagner they are taking a whole lot of practice. The Yarnigans won their fourth straight game from the regulars Monday, this time by a score of 3 to 1.

A hard practice session was held before the game was started. Collins, Johnson, Radloff, Kelly and Garlow pitched for the winners, and with the exception of the last named were very effective. Foster, Leonard, Zeiser, Coumbe and Mulrenan pitched for the losers. Hooper was the only man to get more than one hit in the five innings played.

Scott played at short and Judge at first for the Yarnigans, and both showed up finely both in the field and at the bat.

RILEY TO COACH AMHERST ELEVEN

AMHERST.—Official announcement has been made that Thomas J. Riley, coach at the University of Maine for the past four years, has been engaged to coach the Amherst football team next fall. Riley's contract calls for a term of two years.

While at Maine, Riley turned out three teams that won the Maine championship and last season his eleven tied Yale in a nothing to nothing game.

SIX-MAN RULE IS FAVORED BY HOCKEY EXPERTS

Russell Bowie and Robert Mel-drum, Veteran Officials, Indorse Style Used in Canada

MONTREAL, P. Q.—Unqualified indorsement of the six-man rule under which the hockey teams of western Canada have been playing was given Monday night by Russell Bowie and Robert Mel-drum, two veteran hockey officials who served in the game between the Wanderers and the Vancouver. Both declared after the match that from a spectator's standpoint the six-man game showed up as distinctly better than the seven-man game, but they were less willing to express an opinion on the rule that permits offside passes in a marked-off area in center rink.

"My objection to the new offside rule," said Bowie, "is that it encourages loafing among the forwards. Undoubtedly it opens up possibilities for clever plays, but I would have to see it played in a few matches before saying that I think it an improvement over the old rule."

"The test of the new rule," said Mel-drum, "was hardly under favorable conditions. It was practically new to one team. Get two teams playing who are thoroughly familiar with the new rule, and then you would have a chance to form an opinion."

One of the contentions advanced for the western rule is that it eliminates a lot of stopping up for offside passes and makes for more continuous hockey.

MICHIGAN NINE PLANS OUTDOOR PRACTISE TODAY

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—Coach Lungren expects to take the University of Michigan baseball squad outdoors this afternoon for the first practice of the year on Ferry field. This is the earliest the Wolverines have been outdoors in the last 10 years. The weather has been warm for a week, but until the winds of the last two days dried up the grounds the playing field was too soft.

Indications are that the warm weather will continue, which will give the Michigan nine a flying start this year. There are nearly three weeks before the annual southern trip, the schedule opening with Kentucky University at Lexington on Saturday, April 4. Within the last five years only on one occasion has a Michigan team had more than three days outdoor work before the Dixie trip.

With a veteran infield, three veteran pitchers, a catcher and an outfielder left from last year's team indications point to the best diamond team of many seasons. Capt. Sisler, the star left-handed pitcher and batter of the team, is in championship form already, while the other moundmen are rapidly acquiring speed and control.

MANAGER O'DAY LIKES INFIELD

TAMPA, Fla.—Manager Henry O'Day of the Chicago Nationals says that the addition of W. J. Sweeney to the Cubs' infield had strengthened the Chicago team 50 per cent.

"Of course," said Manager O'Day, "I would have liked to get Pitcher Perdue in addition to Sweeney, but as between the two there is no room for an argument. Sweeney is the man I wanted, for he will help to fill the vacancies and, besides, will give me an infield that will be the equal of any in the league."

Sweeney is one of the best second basemen in the business. Evers and Doyle may surpass him, but very little. With Sweeney on second, I guess I will have one of the fastest infields of the league."

VETERANS OUT FOR PLACES ON TUFTS VARSITY

Experienced Players Available for Every Position Except First Base—Coach Slattery Says Nine's Chances Very Good

OPEN SEASON APRIL 10

With the original squad of 46 candidates that answered Coach John T. Slattery's first call for material to make the Tufts College baseball team for 1914 cut to 29, and with every member of this latter squad showing form that promises to make the final selection a difficult proposition, the prospects for turning out one of the strongest nines that has ever represented Tufts are very bright indeed. Coach Slattery has stated that it all depends on the way his pitching staff shows up and that if the men continue to develop at the rate they have started Tufts will have a high class ball team. The rest of the team, Mr. Slattery said, can be depended upon to give the box men good support and his chief effort will be centered in coaching the pitching candidates.

At present the squad is putting in two hours or more of hard practice every afternoon in the baseball cage in the gymnasium, and Coach Slattery intends to start the outdoor practice just as early as the ground is in fit condition. In spite of the fact that the men are doing exceptionally well inside, Mr. Slattery has hopes of even greater progress when the men begin their outdoor work. All of the men on the squad will be given a thorough opportunity to show what they can do, and will be given trials at different positions. It is also thought probable that new men will show up when the team starts outdoor work.

Eight candidates for the pitching position are now working out with the squad, and from these eight the final selections will in all probability, be made. Raymond Krepps, '16M, and F. E. Harris, '15M, are the most likely pitchers of the lot. Both men pitched this season with their old form, and will be the star first string pitchers this season. The other pitchers are W. E. Whitaker, '17M, a first year man who made a record as a pitcher last season at Worcester Academy; H. F. Burrill, '17M, William Bergan, '14D; B. Golder, '16, who pitched on the second team last year; F. W. Gately, a freshman who made a good record at Waltham High School, and O. Westcott, '17, who pitched last year on the Dean Academy nine.

W. Bennett '14, a member of the varsity squad for three years, and A. I. Nellis '16, of last year's varsity seem to be showing the best form of the catching candidates, although A. G. Eastman '15 and R. Comee '15, both catchers on last year's second team are showing almost equally well. Other candidates for the catcher's position are J. F. Killory '16D, A. B. Porter '17, A. E. O'Brien '16M, who caught last year at Dean Academy, and A. J. Ring, '17M.

For the outfield Coach Slattery has George Angell '15 and Philip Marzany '15, both of the varsity for two years, and the most promising outfielders this year; A. V. Donnellan '16, last year varsity man; J. A. Godfrey '14, who has made the second team three years in succession, and E. F. Hall '16 of last year's second team. From these men the varsity outfield for this year will be selected.

P. M. Proctor '13, shortstop on the varsity for three years, H. A. Stafford '16, last year's varsity second basemen; Capt. B. Lee, third basemen on the varsity for two years, and H. E. Armstrong '16, varsity third basemen, are the most likely looking infielders. For a first basemen a new man must be obtained, and the most promising candidates for that place so far are R. Turner '17 of the Winthrop high school team; Walter Volk '17D, and W. M. Roache '17D. Tufts has a schedule of 29 games, the season opening with a game at Medford April 10 with Colgate.

BOSTON TO PLAY CLEVELAND NINE

AMERICUS, Ga.—The Boston Nationals meet the Cleveland American Association team here this afternoon in the second of their practice matches. The first was played here Monday and resulted in an 8 to 6 victory for Cleveland in a hard-fought 10-inning contest.

George and Benn pitched for the winners, and while they were found for 12 hits, they kept them so well scattered that the best Boston could do in any one inning was two runs.

Hogg and Strand pitched for Boston and they were found for 16 hits. Cleveland practically won the game in the third inning, when "runs were scored. Boston showed up best in the field, not getting an error, while Cleveland made three. Evers was in charge of the Boston team in the absence of Manager Stallings.

COOPER JOINS FEDERAL LEAGUE

FT. WORTH, Tex.—Outfielder Claude Cooper of the New York National league baseball team has signed a three-year contract with the Brooklyn Federals. His salary was said to be $5000 a year, of which he received one year's pay in advance.

TWENTY-TWO MEN REPORT FOR WORK TO COACH SEXTON

Small Squad Turns Out in Answer to Call for Candidates for the Harvard Varsity Nine

At the first call for fielding candidates for the Harvard varsity nine 22 men reported to Coach Sexton and Captain Wingate in the baseball cage on Soldiers field Monday afternoon. The work given the candidates for the infield and outfield positions was very light, and the squad was one of the smallest to report for the baseball team for some years.

Last fall a large squad started practice but there were several cuts, the squad being greatly reduced. The small number of candidates has an advantage, in as much as it allows Coach Sexton to devote more time to each man, and prevents the loss of time when there are a great many to handle.

Eight members of last year's star team were among the candidates that answered the call. Coach Sexton stated that no man was sure of his place on the team unless he played first-class baseball right through. The men will be given light practice in the cage until the field is in proper condition for outdoor work. Coach Sexton will give the men light workouts this week, and will not start the real strenuous work until next week.

FEDERALS WILL DRAFT SCHEDULE

CHICAGO—Lloyd Rickart, secretary of the Federal league, has left for St. Louis, where he will begin the work of drafting the league's playing schedule. It is said efforts will be made to avoid conflict with the better drawing teams in cities which have both National and American league clubs, and, if possible, to avoid them entirely in the others.

President Gilmore of the Federals was asked in a letter from a club owner in an eastern league that he reimburse the club for a player who jumped to the new organization. The club had paid $750 for the player, but Gilmore declined to start a precedent by reimbursing it.

COLUMBIA SQUAD CUT TO 74 MEN

NEW YORK.—The first cut of the season was made Monday in Columbia's baseball squad and 74 candidates were retained. There are 48 men for the varsity squad and 26 for the freshman team.

Coaches Lush and Coakley are working them out in six sections, and each man has a half-hour's practice daily. In addition to this practice for the freshmen, the recruits are required to go out on South field each afternoon to assist in clearing the diamond in an attempt to hurry outdoor training.

ALFRED BROWN CHANGES PLANS

NEW YORK.—Alfred Brown, America's best professional long distance swimmer, had made all arrangements to sail for Europe on July 18, in order to attempt the crossing of the English channel, but he is so anxious to see the amateur race on the 19th over the Battery to Sandy Hook course, which he was the first to ever cover, that he has now decided to postpone his departure until early August.

NEW YORK.—Eighteen teams will compete for the women's doubles indoor tennis championship of the United States which will begin today on the courts of the seventh regiment armory. ## STALLINGS IS AFTER RARIDEN

WICHITA FALLS, Tex.—Catcher William Rariden of the Indianapolis Federals, who last season played with the Boston Nationals, has received a telegram from Manager George T. Stallings of the Boston club asking for a conference. Rariden ignored the telegram and declared that he is with the Federals to stay.

"I have given Gaffney and Stallings ample time to accept my terms, but they were unwilling to add the $300 to my salary to which I felt I was entitled, and so I signed up with Manager Phillips of the Indianapolis club and have not the slightest reason to regret it."

COACHES BARRED FROM THE BENCH

Coaches and graduates will be barred from the players' bench of the Harvard baseball team during games this season, according to Dean Le Baron R. Briggs, chairman of the committee on athletics, in his annual report.

He said it was desired that the team should be thrown on its own responsibility and that the exigencies of the game should be met by the captain instead of by coaches. The baseball squad had its first outdoor practice Monday.

WASHINGTON FENCERS WIN

E. W. GARDNER IS NOW LEADING IN BILLIARD PLAY

Joseph Mayer Defeats J. F. Poggenburg in National Amateur Class A Play Thus Dissolving the Top-Place Tie

TWO GAMES TODAY

NEW YORK.—E. W. Gardner is today undisputed holder of first place in the national amateur class A 18.2 balkline billiard tournament which is being contested at the Amateur Billiard Club as the result of the victory of Joseph Mayer over J. F. Poggenburg, Monday by a score of 400 to 254. Gardner and Poggenburg were previously tied for first place and as Gardner did not play Monday he is now leading.

Two games are scheduled to be played today. E. W. Gardner meeting E. L. Milburn in the afternoon and M. D. Brown playing Charles Heddon in the evening.

It was Poggenburg's first defeat, and while for a time it appeared as if he would keep up his unbeaten record he fell away as the game progressed, and in the end was badly beaten. Mayer averaged 12.23-31 for 31 innings, with high runs of 59, 47, and 42, while Poggenburg's scores showed 8.14-30 for each inning he played. His best individual efforts were 37, 27 and 24.

The result of the match will probably have an important bearing on the tournament, as it puts Champion Mayer into the running again and makes him a serious contender.

Although defeated in the afternoon game by M. D. Brown of the Hamilton Club, Brooklyn, Dr. W. E. Uffenheimer of Philadelphia played a spectacular game. He scored 102 carroms in one inning and came within three points of the high run of 105 held by Brown, who defeated the Philadelphia 400 to 350 after an interesting competition, in which the rival players alternated in the lead. The summary:

ACCEPTABLE MEDITATION

WRITTEN FOR THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

HAPPINESS and prosperity have ever been associated in the thoughts of mortals. Men have believed they could be happy if they were to become prosperous. But he who postpones his happiness until strenuous effort shall have won prosperity's favor, discovers that happiness does not respond to human will. It is quite as likely to elude a rich material setting as a less attractive one. To suppose that we can succeed in constructing a material setting for happiness and then produce it upon occasion is folly. We must begin rightly and seek happiness at its spiritual source. Quite overlooked by the mortal in quest of material riches, is the simple fact that true happiness and prosperity are primarily mental. They are allied in essence, and because they spring continuously from the same source, the appearance of one cannot be delayed by non-appearance of the other. Their substance is found in spiritual meditation. It is there that true prosperity and true happiness are seen to be perpetual facts to the real, spiritual man.

One whose consciousness is imbued with spiritual happiness experiences the truest prosperity for he dwells in a mental atmosphere that magnifies good. The obstacles and difficulties which seem to bar prosperity's appearance are minimized and removed by spiritual perception of Truth. Earnest meditation upon the eternal facts of being and the laws that govern real being, overcomes material hindrances at their mental source by destroying the false belief that any obstruction can stand between God and man. This action of thought destroys the seeming power of adversity, and eventually external changes are wrought to correspond with truer thought. Real happiness is therefore an essential element of true prosperity. Prosperity separated from happiness is an impossibility in true living. The first Psalm points to spiritual meditation as the well-spring of both happiness and prosperity. The man who is "blessed," finds "his delight in the law of the Lord; and in his law doth he meditate day and night." It is further said of him that "he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper."

Let no one suppose that this spiritual meditation is a sort of self-deceiving reverie or idle castle-building. One cannot dream himself into happiness or prosperity. But all men may scientifically think their way into blessed spiritual harmony which is always attended by practical improvement in outward conditions. To Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy is due the credit for having discovered and founded the true system of scientific, corrective, constructive thinking in this age, Christian Science. Many who have learned through this Science to love God and His law joyfully affirm, "My meditation of him shall be sweet."

"The meditation of my heart shall be of understanding." It is precisely because, through Christian Science, our meditation is of understanding, that it is sweet to us. For, in practical, work-a-day living, hard-pressed men and women have no time to dream of a sweetness that proves unavailing when needs arise. Men soon weary of meditating upon a God who is to them but a vague mystery, and whose laws may work through disaster. But Christian Science clears up all uncertainty. It takes thought right to the primal source and shows that because God is Spirit, All-in-all, infinite Love, that therefore He must be and is an ever-present, divine Principle pervading all being, from vastest magnitudes to least minutiae. "To grasp the reality and order of being in its Science," Mrs. Eddy writes, "you must begin by reckoning God as the divine Principle of all that really is. Spirit, Life, Truth, Love, combine as one, — and are the Scriptural names for God. All substance, intelligence, wisdom, being, immortality, cause, and effect belong to God. These are his attributes, the eternal manifestations of the infinite divine Principle, Love" (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, the Christian Science text-book, p. 275).

When we recognize God as all-inclusive ever-operative divine Principle, meditating upon His law becomes the most practical, achieving influence in the whole world. Every hour, from our stillest morning prayer through the busiest moments of the day, thought may be held steadfastly to the truth concerning everything and every work that claims our attention. Then the true spiritual life cannot be hidden from us by the old ignorant habit of regarding existence and all its activities as material. Truer perception of man as a spiritual being is a forerunner of health, happiness and prosperity. "This clearer consciousness must precede an understanding of the harmony of being. Mortal thought must obtain a better basis, get nearer the truth of being, or health will never be universal, and harmony will never become the standard of man" (Science and Health, p. 553).

If our thought constantly revolves around divine Love, we shall rise, gradually, perhaps, but certainly, to mental ascendancy over the torments of fear, hatred, anger, pride or resentment that breed inharmonious and ill-health. If, "day and night," we meditate upon God as the source of all supply, fear of failure, worry, anxiety, are purged away. The false desire for material wealth ceases to harass as a pure desire to know God absorbs us. When we grasp the spiritual law underlying the promise, "Whatsoever he doeth shall prosper," we gladly turn from striving after external prosperity as a setting for happiness, and deeply pray, "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my redeemer."

Unexplored Australia

There are millions of acres of splendid land still unexplored in Queensland, good land fit for pasture and easy of access from without. Any man of determination could take the land there and make a good thing of it. That is the conclusion arrived at by a well-known Australian, Francis Birtles, who has compassed the interior of the great Australian continent in a motor car. He planned his trip carefully and traveled right up through Victoria, New South Wales, and Queensland, thoroughly exploring the regions through which he passed, and is convinced that miles upon miles of splendid country are lying ready for any farmer possessed of sufficient enterprise and energy to undertake big things. Mr. Birtles believes that the governments of the various states should take steps to have these vast tracts of good land explored, and throws out a hint that perhaps the quickest and most effectual explorations could be made by aeroplane.

NEW SONG OF THE OPEN ROAD

AMONG pictures of stately suburban houses and formal Italian gardens and thrifty crops stretching away from the well-kept door-yards, a writer in Suburban Life opens a door into the wilderness beyond the suburbs and leads the reader out in company with him on a trip over the open road. He says that the open road is not a thing of macadam nor even plain dirt. And it is not, indeed. It is a mental attitude. One man may pass through the sweet woodland close over a trail marked by hand-fuls of torn grass, and not know he is on the open road; another may feel the spring when he crosses a city square and be instantly off and away to the horizon beyond the city smoke.

The open road may lead across uplands where only cow paths break the flourishing scrub. It may dive into the pine-wood shadow and pause thirstily at the brook. It may stop for the night by the well-guarded campfire, where supper is presently cooked over glowing coals hoarded in an oven of stones. The open road may lie amid the sedge delights of a brook seeping through meadow grass. Here a canoe is the companion of the trail, and as the writer says of his own, named Gray Brother, this light thing which can be lifted with one hand or scuttled by a careless heel floats safe as a gull over the gray wilderness of the lake when the wind is romping there.

Lord Strathcona as Count of Monte Cristo

To many graduates of Aberdeen University Lord Strathcona was known as "The Count." He won the title in 1906 in connection with the quarter-centenary celebrations of the University. Lord Strathcona began his share of the hospitalities by giving a dinner to the poor of Aberdeen and another to the undergraduates. But it was when he proposed to invite all the graduates of Aberdeen, says the Manchester (England) Guardian, that the largeness of his ideas came out. The University authorities were staggered. "Thousands will come," they said, "and they were right. Graduates of all ages accepted, and among them was at least one who graduated in the 'forties." Lord Strathcona was not dismayed. "How many thousands!" he asked. "Perhaps four or five—and there is no place that will hold them." "Build one," said Lord Strathcona. "But in all Scotland there is no one who can cater for such a large party," they said. "Build a hall," Lord Strathcona answered: "I'll pay for it, and I'll see about the catering." The hall was built, the dinner and the table appointments and waiters were all sent down from London by special train, 5000 people sat down to a perfectly arranged meal, and the gathering was a huge success. It was said that the evening cost Lord Strathcona £2000, so they named him "The Count"—the Count of Monte Cristo.

JOHN STUART MILL'S EDUCATION PLAN

THE very corner-stone of an education intended to form great minds must be the recognition of the principle, that the object is to call forth the greatest possible quantity of intellectual power, and to inspire the intensest love of truth; . . . even though it should conduct the pupil to opinions diametrically opposite to those of his teachers. . . . For in proportion to the degree of intellectual power and love of truth which we succeed in creating, is the certainty that . . . in the aggregate of instances true opinions will be the result. . . . The details cannot be too various and comprehensive. Ancient literature would fill a large place in such a course of instruction; because it brings before us the thought and actions of many great minds. . . . Nor is it to be forgotten among the benefits of familiarity with the monuments of antiquity, and especially those of Greece, that we are taught by them to appreciate and admire intrinsic greatness, amidst opinions, habits, and institutions most remote from ours. . . . An important place in the system of education which we contemplate would be occupied by history; because it is the record of all great things which have been achieved by mankind, and because when philosophically studied it gives a certain largeness of conception to the student, and familiarizes him with the action of great causes. The literature of our own and other modern nations should be studied along with the history, or rather as part of the history. . . . The pupil must be led to interrogate his own consciousness, to observe and experiment upon himself.

In the Name of Mankind

If you can throw new light upon moral truth, or by any exertions multiply the comforts or confirm the happiness of mankind, this fame guides you to the true ends of your nature; but . . . as you tremble at retributive justice; and in the name of mankind, if mankind be dear to you; seek not that easy and accursed fame which is gathered in the work of revolutions; and deem it better to be forever unknown than to found a momentary name upon the basis of anarchy and irreligion.—Sidney Smith.

Perfection

Trifles make perfection, and perfection is no trifle.—Michael Angelo.

Calumet and Hecla Pioneer

The long fight of Alexander Agassiz to bring out of the Calumet and Hecla mines the treasures he knew were there makes an amazing story of tenacity of purpose in the face of overwhelming odds. It seemed as if all the elements and every conceivable circumstance went against him. Trusted lieutenants betrayed his trust, unexpected developments thwarted his best laid plans. Once when after long waiting and incalculable expense, at a time when delay, moreover, could hardly be overcome, he found that the engine sent up through what was then a wilderness did not fit the track that had been laid with endless trouble. Some one had blundered, measuring inside instead of outside of the flange of the wheel as it was to fit the rails. So slight an error made all the difference between success and failure, or so it seemed. However, as the world knows, even this obstacle was overcome and the fact established that a famous savant may be a practical man of affairs and president of one of the largest financial interests of the time. Perhaps the same quality of patience and persistence made alike the naturalist and the executive.

Schooling the Navy

In his plans for schooling the blue-jackets of the United States navy, Secretary Daniels hopes eventually to make even university extension a part of the attraction to the seaman's work. He thinks that much spare time can be used that is not now usefully employed and that the offers for teaching of different sorts made by the United States have not always been carried out far enough. He wants the enlisted men to return to civilian occupations knowing more than they did about many useful things as well as seamanship—better citizens, in short. He hopes by this offer of educational advantages to attract the best young men of the country. The New York Sun, telling of these things, pictures the classes on shipboard, some writing, some using typewriters, some studying "wireless" in the operating room of the North Dakota.

Academic teaching, such as the higher branches of mathematics, will be given in connection with technical and naval subjects and the hope is to increase this higher education till every man can go as far as he pleases in study and research while he is a part of the navy.

Optimism Comes of Love

You cannot make an optimist of a man by arguing with him. Optimism is a secretion of love. No one who loves his wife and children, loves his neighbors, loves his work and loves his play, is ever a pessimist.—The De-linicator.

Minister of Joy

Press your genius and your eloquence into the service of the Lord, your righteousness to magnify His word and display the riches of His grace. Who knoweth whether He may honor you to be the minister of joy to the disconsolate, of liberty to the captive, of life to the dead?—John M. Mason.

Christians Should Vote

Multitudes of Christians and patriots have long since abandoned party politics and not knowing what to do have almost abandoned the exercise of suffrage. This is wrong. An enlightened and virtuous suffrage may, by system and concentration, become one of the most powerful means of promoting national purity and morality; as the suffrage from which the influence of conscience is withdrawn cannot fail to be disastrous. . . . Let all Christians and all patriots exercise their rights as electors with an inflexible regard to moral character.—Lyman Beecher.

Words Ate Things

Words are things, and a small drop of ink, falling like dew upon a thought, produces That which makes thousands, perhaps millions think. —Byron.

STEVENSON ON THE ART OF TALKING

THERE can be no fairer ambition than to excel in talk; to be affable, gay, ready, clear and welcome; to have a fact, a thought, or an illustration, put to every subject; and not only to cheer the flight of time among our intimates, but bear our part in that great international congress, always sitting, where public wrongs are first declared, public errors first corrected, and the course of public opinion shaped, day by day, a little nearer to the right. This is the conclusion of R. L. Stevenson, who adds: No measure comes before Parliament but it has been long ago prepared by the grand jury of the talkers; no book is written that has not been largely composed by their assistance. Literature in many of its branches is no other than the shadow of good talk; but the imitation falls far short of the original in life, freedom and effect. There are always two to a talk, giving and taking, comparing experience and according conclusions. Talk is fluid, tentative, continually "in further search and progress." . . . It cannot, even if it would, become merely esthetic or merely classical, like literature. A jest intervenes, the solemn humbug is dissolved in laughter, the speech runs forth out of the contemporary groove into the open fields of nature, cheer and cheering, like school-boys out of school. And it is in talk alone that we can learn our period and ourselves. . . . Talk, which is the harmonious speech of two or more, is by far the most accessible of pleasures. It costs nothing in money; it is all profit.

Single Book or Even One Word Constitutes a Library

To most people a library presupposes books, pamphlets or manuscripts, if not all three; certainly a collection of written or printed signs. But Ernest Cushing Richardson, librarian of Princeton University, spending his days surrounded by printed books of words, words, words, has concluded, and brings forth a goodly amount of evidence to prove, that a library may consist in its simplest form of a "single recorded sign kept for use." This, he says, is the feeble, faint beginning of a library, but just as much a library, as the New York public library, the library of Congress, the British Museum, or the Bibliotheque Nationale—and the beginning of library wisdom is to seek out diligently the nature of these rudimentary libraries.

He asserts that we are incorrect to assume that a library is a collection. Even a one-book library is a library, just as much as a one-celled plant is a plant. To the expected question, "What is a book?" he answers: "A book is any record of thought in words. Here again neither size, form, nor material matters; even a one-word record may be a book, and that book a library. This leads again, however, to still another question. What is a word? Without stopping to elaborate or to discuss definitions in detail, we may take the next step and define a word as 'any sign for anything,' and again explain the sign as anything which points to something other than itself."

In his book, "The Beginnings of Libraries," Dr. Richardson treats of three chief forms of primitive writings: the mnemonic, or picture writing; the phonetic, which was mature in the time of the early Egyptian dynasties four millenniums B. C.; and the alphabetic form, coming in two millenniums later. Among the mnemonic "books" are the abacus, the sand-strewn tray with which Pythagoras taught geography; the wampum of the North American Indian, which though used as money, was made, when woven into bands or belts, to show pictorially the articles of treaties, and the history of tribal events, or religious usages; and the quipu, or knotted cord books of the Peruvian Indians. Of the last named he says:

"At bottom, the idea does not differ from the simple tying of knots in a handkerchief as a reminder, or the sailors' log line. It has been most commonly used for numerical records, but in many cases it preserved and transmitted very extensive historical records. One very simple use was the noting on different colored cords by knots the number of the different animals taken to market for sale, and again the price received for these at market. . . . Collections of any of these kept in the tent or temple or even the counting house, are, of course, true libraries, or at least true collections of written documents."

Vale of Causerets' Hautes Pyrenees by Night

Though night is here,
In outline soft I see
A vista through the gloom, where, mirrored clear,
Gleam rock and peak and tree.

The dark green pines
Clothe all the slopes around—
How lone these slopes on which each cold star shines!
Nor doth a single sound
Invade the calm,—
Or by its presence change
The sense of vastness, soothing like
A balm,
From heaven so new and strange.

—Mackenzie Bell.

Alaska's State Operated Railway

HISTORY in connection with Alaska as a political entity and as a rich and unworked outlying territory of the nation has been made rapidly of late years. Fortunately for the interests of all present or future settlers and fortunately also for the national good name, the trend has been in the direction of conservation, and not of the exploitation that once seemed likely. With signing of the bill authorizing construction of a railway for the territory by the federal government and appropriating $35,000,000 with which to build it, a long step forward has been taken toward insuring for the region a highway that will open it to the world and enable persons and corporations developing the agricultural and mineral resources of the land to get their spoil down to the sea and thence to the markets of the world. When this bill is supplemented, as it will be, by the law governing leases of lands to bona fide settlers and prescribing the permanent rights of the national government to reservations underlain with fuel deposits, there will be rapid settlement and development.

Of course this first experiment of the nation with railway construction will be watched with unusual interest by champions and by critics of the policy. Knowing this the President and Secretary Lane, who have supervision of the task, undoubtedly will be most careful in selecting subordinates to carry on the work. United States army engineers, and also administrators who have proved competent in Panama, no doubt will be enlisted. Nor will thoroughly competent men, trained on the home railways, be lacking for anything that the government may summon them to do.

In a way national honor is involved. Add to this the appeal of professional pride and the desire of men to have their life labor associated with great enterprises, and there need be no questioning as to whether a high grade staff of builders can be assembled. The factor that should be guarded against in this enterprise is partisan politics. Under Secretary Lane's direction of territorial affairs, this menace has not counted for much. It will hardly do much harm if United States army men not only plan the road but supervise its building and begin to operate it.

Magazines Under Their Own Indictment

THE habitual magazine reader, turning from the array of cover brilliancy and inside triviality on the newsstand, will pass no severer criticism on the offering than was spoken the other day at Philadelphia by men who are of the craft. The editors, facing the question as to what is the matter with their product, put it all on the lack of ideality. There will be no joint debate on that issue. It has come about that the monthly contribution, which enriched the reading of another generation, is an instrument of poverty to the present one. Old and high standards forgotten, even the later ones of pursuit of current wrongdoing lowered to sensationalism, inattention sets in and the effort at popularity yields a product that hardly better than insults popular tastes. The spared periodicals are few, hardly plural, holding their ground against a pressure that makes the business one of doubtful repute. The editors have said as much and in stronger terms.

Success by some of the ventures that took the lower level has been the lure to the magazines of former quality to seek riches in the same plane. Perhaps there is now a dawn of realization that the people's estimate was not so coarse nor their demand so low as was supposed. It has yet to show itself in any measure of restoration of the magazine quality that made possession of a copy of any one of several of the leading monthlies a badge of refinement and its place on the family reading table the source of unqualified satisfaction. That it will come is a prediction that rests upon the certainty that the public taste will be better gauged and when understood complied with. Meanwhile, there are the newspapers.

In the same period that has been marked by magazine decline, there has begun the advance of the daily paper toward the quality that the older reviews maintained. Comparison between the general reading offered by the better newspapers and the contents of the magazines of current date will establish the fact that the enterprise of delivering valuable reading material has passed to new hands. It will not be claimed, at least not yet, that any more frequent publication can make good the place of the monthly. There is a place reserved for it—a place from which it has been hurrying away. The editors having seen it, the publisher may be expected to arrive at the same perception.

Bay State May Have Constitution Revised

THERE is more than a passing and more than a local interest in the prospect that Massachusetts will revise her constitution in a convention. It was hardly more than a nebulous one when a Democratic Governor proposed it in his inaugural address to a Legislature in both houses of which his party was in the minority; but it assumed form when it secured, the other day, the approval of the representatives. There was a division as to the method of election, the Republican leader winning his way in the substitute for the administration bill and securing the elimination of the party label on the ballot for its members. Whether with a party coloring, or without, is minor to the fact that the convention is supported; but so far as it is important it ought to have value in bringing to the high council of revision the men who are fitted in some better way than party connection for its tasks.

The document which the convention will take in hand, if it be finally provided, is the spared monument of the constitution-makers of the revolutionary period. Massachusetts was first to ask of the continental Congress the privilege which, in that season of deference to the national authority, it was considered must be secured there. The first frame of government of an independent state was submitted in 1778 and the people showed the possession of the power to discriminate when, although they wanted a constitution, they rejected the one proffered. The product of the convention of 1780, meeting popular ratification, has remained the fundamental law of the commonwealth, and its forty amendments are the record of adaptation to changing needs that have not been held to require an overturning of the foundation. The convention of 1820 submitted proposals that were adopted as amendments, but the one of 1853 failed of approval for its newly drafted instrument. It is a record of balanced conservatism and progress that has its high claim to admiration. That a general revision is now needed, seems to be, in spite of the action of one branch of the Legislature, a debatable question.

Hardly a better body could be gathered than the Massachusetts convention of 1853. The debates, which are found in full report on the shelves of the public libraries of the towns, were broad and able. The product was less a radical departure than may be expected of a similar assembly in a time when constitutions have generally become liquid. That it promises the attainment of those reforms which are held at this moment to be required with greater certainty than by the separate amendments two successive Legislatures may propose, is not apparent. Something is to be said for the distinct proposal of one topic at a time in preference to a complete revision or even a group of changes. It is significant, all the same, that the first commonwealth finds reason for the unusual and extreme method. It betokens the earnestness of the demand for new devices that is of the times, not, be it said, without its need of caution against shifting for the sake of change.

THE Muhammadan goes to Mecca and views the Kaaba. The Roman Catholic makes his pilgrimage to Rome and Mons Vaticanus. The Anglican seeks the great abbey at Westminster. The Quaker finds his Mecca, Rome, and Westminster in the little brick meeting-house over whose tiles the beeches spread their arms at Jordans. When Justice Bennet, a veritable Justice Shallow, if ever there was one, contemptuously hurled the name of "Quaker" at Fox, he little knew that he was making history; and when the tiny band which met in Jordans farmhouse determined to go forth and build their Torcello on the edge of the beech wood hard by, they had no idea that the stately little building, with all its insignificance, would one day become a place of pilgrimage, not only for the people of their faith, but for the vast nation springing up beyond the Atlantic.

There is something in the building peculiarly fitted to its purpose. Ruskin, designing a factory in the Isle of Man, succeeded in producing an edifice which, though he smiled at it himself, as a piece of nineteenth century architecture, nevertheless he declared was an example of the fitness of things. The Quakers have built many meeting-houses besides Jordans, but not one of them can vie, either in interest or importance, with it. If they had meant to choose, which they certainly did not, the most perfect setting imaginable, they could not have acted on a surer instinct. If they had meant to erect the most perfect of buildings for its purpose, they could not have succeeded more completely. Brunelleschi or Wren would probably have failed utterly where presumably the carpenter or one of the Chalfonts has succeeded admirably. The exterior, with its steep sloped roof and tall chimney, is just as in keeping with its surroundings as is the long room within, with its plain forms and raised seat along one end.

What Rome has been to Luther, that London became to Fox. The Quaker in his early days had fled from the town to the woods of his native Leicestershire. It was natural, in such circumstances, that the Westminster of the Quakers should have found its place in the Buckinghamshire woods. There was no liberty of conscience in those days for any people who could not defend themselves with the rapier of the cavalier or the long sword of the parliamentary trooper. In the manor houses and farms of the counties, the Society of Friends first established itself, and though the great cities came quickly enough to have their meeting-houses and though the "Friends" labored earnestly and untiringly in their midst, yet it is in Jordans, rather than in Gracechurch street, that the spirit of the great movement seems to have best expressed itself.

Inventors as National Assets

SO MUCH of contemporary civilization derives its present significance from wealth accumulated by man's discoveries and inventions that it is possible, yea even common, for nations to be rated according to their production, training and pecuniary recompense of pioneers in harnessing nature. Thus it is that Edison would probably on a world-referendum get more votes as the United States' most distinguished citizen than any statesman, educator, artist or philanthropist of the country would poll. Indeed, the results of several tests of this kind carried on by overseas journals during the past decade clearly show this to be the fact. Likewise, if a poll were taken in the United States today, asking estimates as to who is the greatest of contemporary Italians, the choice would very likely be Marconi.

Of course, the thinker who puts ideas and ideals above things cannot assent to this popular elevation of the inventor of mechanisms to a plane above a man or woman who informs or inspires mankind intellectually or spiritually; and it is doubtful whether a generation hence, as the present reaction against materialism proceeds on its way, there will even be the popular laudation that now goes up for men of the Edison-Marconi type. Sages, poets, prophets and statesmen are coming to their own again.

All of this seems possible and desirable and can be encouraged in every way, without in any way undervaluing the precise place always filled by men who first make telephones, aeroplanes, cinematographs, wireless telegraphy apparatus, locomotive airbrakes and similar mechanical devices. A city like Pittsburgh, that has a Westinghouse for a resident inventor and capitalist, has an asset of much value, so valuable that ordinary methods of estimating a person's creation of wealth break down in the presence of such an inquiring intellect, organizing will and fertile imagination. Large as was the income poured in upon him by his mastery of problems of invention and manufacture it was small and fractional compared with the wealth he created for communities where his inventions were manufactured and sold on a huge scale. Viewed simply as an economic factor working in a national and international arena a man like Westinghouse, Edison or Wright becomes a national asset.

Producing on a smaller scale and working in lesser ways are many persons in the United States, whose accumulated inventive skill, proved by the incessant stream of patents granted and later marketed, aids indubitably in steadily pushing up and up the total wealth of the nation, and this at a swift rate.

With Regard to the Kitchenless Home

IN an address delivered by Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman at the Hotel Astor in New York city the other day, she ventured the prediction that the home of the future will have its grass plot and its hearthstone and its children, but no kitchen. The housewife of the future, according to this lady, will do her ordering the night before from a laboratory conducted for the special purpose of supplying kitchenless homes with food. This food will be delivered in thermos boxes. Fifty per cent of the people of the world, it was held, are now busy waiting on the other 50 per cent, and yet the work could be done by 7 per cent. The whole trouble lies in the fact, so it was contended, that domestic affairs are carried on in a primitive, inefficient, unsatisfactory manner. Transfer the cooking to a laboratory, abolish the kitchen, dispense with the culinary help, order your food delivered in thermos boxes, and if there is anything more that any reasonable person could desire, that will be attended to later.

One takes altogether too much of a risk in these progressive times in saying that anything conceivable in the nature of improvement and progress is impossible. Too many things have happened, and happened for the better, that some people were positive never could, should or would happen. It would be possible to enumerate scores of improvements introduced into housekeeping during the last few years. But most of these improvements have been intended to make matters pleasanter in the kitchen. Look at the improved ranges, the improved water heaters, the gas stove, the fireless cooker, the long series of electric devices and contrivances for the minimizing of effort—all calculated to make the kitchen a delight rather than a burden! Now, instead of proceeding farther along the same line, instead of working toward the time when the kitchen would almost be the most attractive and alluring part of the house, its abolition is proposed. If the kitchen be abolished a great many things that go with the kitchen must be eliminated also. In short, what is home going to be without a kitchen?

UNDER the apt title "The Art and Craft of Peace Propaganda," one of the leading pacifists enlisted in the international movement brings together information gathered from all parts of the world concerning effective means of winning adherents to the cause. Similar inclusive collection and analysis of material has never been made; hence the data presented in the report become unusually important. Some of the facts which emerge from a world survey are these: The international organization is defective. Responsible labor devolves on a few persons, usually paid officials. Oral argument, whether by distinguished lecturers from abroad or by local adherents, if given in lecture form, produces comparatively small results judged by enlistment of adherents. Attendees too often are predominately women. Summing up the situation, the questioner, who is an official of the international bureau, says, "Nowhere does an organized propaganda exist, carried on according to tried methods. . . . What we lack is not ideas, but fixed plans for propaganda and trained people to carry them out. . . . We shall only meet with slight success so long as the whole art and craft of peace propaganda is not studied."

The bearing of this deliverance has far wider application than the immediate cause of its utterance. More than one excellent idealistic enterprise has come to naught because of failure to recognize that propaganda is an art. This particular cause undoubtedly has gained in favor during the past decade because of enlistment among its promoters of citizens of the United States conspicuous for an organizing skill that made them rich enough to endow peace propaganda foundations and to finance pacifism on a scale never before seen. But even these societies find now that they have considerable to learn about seed sowing and convert winning. Plethoric treasuries, elaborate publication departments and multiplied lectures by traveling celebrities do not of themselves change friends of violence into lovers of peace and concord. To be an artist in peace propaganda is to be equipped for a task that calls for something more than devotion to the abstract ideal of amity. The preacher of good will on a world scale must first practise it locally and domestically. The teacher of love must be a lover of all men, and this in direct, practical ways that will fit him to make a persuasive appeal for alliance against militarism.

THE government seems to have arranged matters so that the income tax will be due and payable about the time the vacation season is beginning. Thus the thoughtful citizen will have an opportunity of adjusting his outgo to it.

CANADA'S plans for making it possible for craft on the Great lakes laden with freight for foreign ports to get direct access to the Atlantic are being brought to a stage where similar propositions, originating in the United States, naturally are being given publicity. For it is with some covetousness that officials of the United States and owners and shippers of vessels navigating the inland seas who are not Canadians watch the working out of the canal system by which the St. Lawrence and the lakes are to be united in a way to secure unbroken carriage from Duluth east.

To break a way south and west and connect the Great lakes with the Mississippi river is a plan urged by some persons, and in time it may be done; but the simpler way is to make the Hudson navigable up to Albany the terminal of the Erie canal, which waterway in its coming enlarged form is expected to provide a freight route more formidable to Canadian rivalry than the canal at present is. Congress rightly will carefully consider this plan to deepen the Hudson for use of seagoing craft. It is a scheme that calls for large appropriations, and can only be justified by undoubted economic gain for the country at large.

When one reads of the way in which alert if ancient nations of Europe are spending money for development of inland waterways in order to increase national commerce it is easy to urge imitation, especially in the light of facts showing how with wise foresight and adequate retention of community control the economic gains that follow such expenditures for expanded commerce are diffused in a fair way among the population taxed for river improvements and canal construction.
